Indignation Meeting at Lynn—The Accident Ascribed to Negligence and Parsimony—Proceedings Before the Coroner.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—The indignation meeting at Lynn, to-night, at the Revere disaster, was attended by a great crowd. The Mayor of the city, Mr. WALDEN, presided. The most prominent citizens of the place made speeches, and a long series of resolutions was adopted. The latter declare that railroad corporations having certain powers and privileges guaranteed them by law are, nevertheless, the servants of the people, bound by the most solemn obligations to provide everything needful for the safety and convenience of their passengers. That this painful event has demonstrated the necessity for a radical change in the present railroad system, and it is therefore demanded that no dense for dividends or profits shall be permitted to prevent the immediate use on the Eastern Railroad of the best appliances of modern invention for stopping and controlling trains, or for the transmission of information between trains and stations. They further demand a through and impartial investigation of the recent disaster, that justice may be done, though convinced that whoever of the subordinates may have been most criminally negligent, the management are very highly responsible for this dreadful catastrophe. A committee of seven of the leading citizens was appointed to go before the President and directors of the road, and urge the immediate making of the necessary improvements, &c., if desirable to appear before the Railroad Commissioners and the Legislature in furtherance of this object. The principal speech of the meeting was made by Ex-Congressman JOHN B. ALLEN. He spoke in strong terms of what he called the "negligence and parsimony" of the managers of the Eastern Road, and stated that he considered these the prime cause of the disaster.

THE INQUEST.

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—The inquest at Revere continued today.

JAMES HICKEY, flagman at Caryville, testified: Had been in that position one year last February; was on duty on the night of the accident; saw both trains pass, the accommodation at twenty minutes past eight; my time is regulated by Chelsea Depot time, and does not vary more than 1½ minutes in a week; caution it often a sharp curve; saw the accommodation-train had passed; looked after accommodation-train had passed; should judge the distance to be three-quarters of a mile; after Beverly train passed, the smoke from the engine settled down so that I could not see the tail lights fifty rods distant; noticed it particularly, and felt alarmed in regard to the safety of the passengers, and thought that the express train would overtake the accommodation, but had no time to stop the express-train by signal, which I would have done, as I felt authorized in doing so under the circumstances; both trains were not in sight at the same time, and were running at the usual speed; think NOWLAND's train was at the crossing when the Pullman was at Tide Bridge.

HENRY D. HILL, of East Boston, testified: That he was an engineer in the freight department, and been on the road nineteen years; was asleep in the depot on the night in question; Mr. BEAL woke to me and said there was going to be a collision; was in the door of the Revere depot when the collision occurred; should judge it was twenty minutes past eight; stepped back into the depot when the train struck, for safety; it took half a minute for the engine after striking to empty itself of steam and water, and should judge the train was running at the rate of ten or fifteen miles an hour; I went to East Boston immediately after the accident for help, and returned with Mr. THOMPSON and doctors; the night was foggy and the condition of the rails greasy.

JAMES A. BEAL, of East Boston, testified: That he was stationary engineer at East Boston, and was in the doorway of the Revere depot when the collision took place; NOWLAND's train arrived one and a half minutes before; first saw the head-light of the Pullman-train coming from under the bridge. [The balance of BEAL's testimony was a corroboration of this of the previous witness.]

JOSEPH E. BABCOCK, of East Boston, testified: I am employed in the engine-house; have been in the employ of the Eastern Railroad Company for twelve years, most of the time on the road; was a passenger on the freight-train which stopped at North Chelsea, and saw the collision; should say it was twenty minutes past eight; just as NOWLAND's train came down, I and another person of my acquaintance left the car, and after I got it, saw the Pullman-train coming down, and thought it would stop, but when it reached Overhead Bridge, saw it had not time to stop, although it was evident they were slacking up the engine; I said: "My God, my God, look at that murder!" could see tail lights of NOWLAND's train much before; spoke to the engineer of the Pullman train, owing to my position; saw the tail-lights of the Beverly train and a lantern that was swung on the crossing.

COLEMAN COOK, a resident of East Boston and real estate man, thought he would be able to catch a train at North Chelsea for the Camp-meeting, and started at a quarter of eight; arrived here at eight; looked at the clock in the depot as ten minutes past eight; saw the train coming with two engines attached; when train arrived stepped upon hand car and asked NOWLAND if he was going to the camp-meeting; he said no; stepped back, and when he was going under the bridge saw the express train coming; remarked that the express train would overhaul the Beverly train; about nine o'clock a man asked for the depot master and said there had been a collision.

GEORGE M. BROWN, the President of the Eastern Railroad, was then called, and being sworn, testified: Had held that position thirteen years; have no means of knowing the number of passengers carried, except by returns; in 1860 we carried from 1,400,000 to 1,500,000 passengers, and in 1869, nearly 1,500,000. The last published return is for ten months, and shows that we have carried about 3,000,000, and think the last two months will make it $4,000,000; in 1866, first by return that the number of cars was forty-seven; by returns in 1870, for ten months, the number is eighty-six; the purchase of cars is managed in this way: The Superintendent makes up his mind as to what cars are needed, and reports to me; I assent, and he goes and orders or purchases them under my direction; no complaints have been made to me until this Summer, and am not aware, from my own observation, that there was a deficiency of cars; the Superintendent was on vacation, and while he was absent Mr. WILLIAMS, one of the directors, first called my attention to the delay of trains; I asked him to see the station agent as to the departure of trains and overcrowding of cars; saw him in the afternoon, and he told me it was remedied. There is a less number of cars used now than formerly, on account of the frequency of the trains which go over the road oftener than they did in 1869, and the cars are also larger and carry a larger number of passengers. Twelve cars have been added to the road since the 1st of January. My attention was called to the accident on a Saratoga train, owing to the crowded condition of the cars; we lost two or three cars by that accident; last Winter had an estimate made of the number of cars which we should want this year, and submitted it to the Board of Directors; it was approved, and I ordered the cars to be made accordingly, I think in May. The Superintendent did not think the shops were doing what they should and he ordered four cars built at the Taunton shops; all the improvements that have been made have been brought to my notice; had complaint last year that we were short of cars, and accordingly made provision for that necessity; all companies make special provision for picnics, musters, camp-meetings and excursions; was not aware the muster was appointed the same week as camp-meeting until afterward, and regretted to hear it, and should have tried to prevent it had I known it in season; have had complaints that the traveling public was not accommodated last year; never made any statement that I did not care for the traveling public, and I do not think I ever made such any such remark as that; we depend upon the traveling public; my own observation would not lead me to think that there was a lack of cars for the accommodation of the public over the road, but once or twice a month I think the better provision we made for the public the more advantageous to the road; the twelve cars we added I thought would exceed the amount of travel this Summer; I had supposed that we had the full and free use of telegraphs, but not long ago the Superintendent called my attention to the fact that he could not have the use of it, and I then thought we should have a wire of our own; do not think there has been any special allusion to the system of telegraphing brought before the Board; the Board of Directors have their meetings once a month; it is the duty of any member to notify the Board of any deficiency as regards cars or wants of any description.

The witness continued at some length, but his evidence presented no new facts. The inquest was adjourned until to-morrow, when the President will continue his testimony.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The Recent Patent Office Disbarring Case—The Russian Minister—Woman Suffrage—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Mr. MARCUS P. NORTON, the Patent attorney, whom the Commissioner of Patents disbarred a few days since, an account of which was printed in these dispatches, has addressed a letter to the editor of the TIMES, in which he claims a great wrong was done him in such publication. He denies the statements thus printed, except the fact that he was disbarred, which act he pronounces illegal. He charges that the order of the Commissioner was the result of a most wicked and infamous conspiracy on the part of Democratic political opponents, who, he alleges, are now employed in the Patent Office. He says the time of his vindication will come, when it will fully appear that what he did was done with the best of motives, in perfect honesty and in honor, and because, in his judgment, it was perfectly right, both in law and equity. Your correspondent gives Mr. NORTON the benefit of this disclaimer, with the remark that the facts were all obtained from the best authority, and that the hearing of the case, which is now set for Thursday of next week, will determine who is right, and with the further remark that since the first announcement of the matter was made additional evidence has been received which gives the affair a still worse aspect.

THE RUSSIAN MINISTER.

The letter from St. Petersburg printed in a New-York paper today, giving a statement of the present status of the differences between Secretary FISH and Mr. DE GATACAZY, the Russian Minister, is another illustration of the intriguing character of the present Russian Envoy, whose reputation has sadly suffered since his residence in this country. That letter is dated Aug. 12, while the conversation to which it alludes did not occur until Aug. 16. Inasmuch as the conversation was only known to Messrs. FISH and GATACAZY, the public can readily infer who is the author of this letter, which is full of misstatements of fact.

THE WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS WIN THEIR SUIT.

The attempt which some women of the Woodhull-Claflin persuasion made in the last election here to get the question of their rights under the Fourteenth Amendment before the Courts, has failed in rather a comical manner. It will be recalled that the Commissioners who refused to register them were sued to recover damages alleged to have been sustained. The question of whether damages should be accorded was expected to turn on the right of the women to vote, which the defendants were, of course, expected to deny. But they have not taken the trouble to make such a denial, or, indeed, to make any defense at all, so judgment stands against them by default, and the only question to be decided is the amount of damages. As the Commissioners will not probably be mulcted in such an amount as will deter them hereafter from refusing to register the political minded dames, some other method of having the question of their constitutional rights tested will have to be devised.

PERSONAL.

Commissioner DOUGLASS left here at noon today for a brief absence. He asked the President, in a communication a day or two since, to designate Solicitor MCMICHAEL as acting Commissioner in his absence, which will no doubt be done, though the designation had not been received when Mr. DOUGLASS went away. Secretary FISH left for his home on the Hudson by the night train. He will be absent some days.

Pennsylvania paid by the settlement of State claims $1,204,708 of the amount due, Massachusetts, Georgia, Kentucky, Michigan, and other States paid the total amount from balances found due. On the settlement of the claims in the Third Auditor's Office the total amount paid into the Treasury and credit is $14,681,700. PEDDLERS.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue writes that since May 1 peddlers are not required to be licensed or to pay special tax as such, and therefore they have no right as peddlers to sell tobacco. Manufacturers are only authorized to sell tobacco in full packages, put up as prescribed in section 42, and stamped, as required by section 41. Peddlers employed by manufacturers to sell their goods have no right in this respect which their principals, the manufacturers, have not, and therefore such peddlers can only sell in original and unbroken packages, and dealers become liable if they retail manufactured tobacco otherwise than from original and stamped packages.

AWAIF FROM THE SEA.

Three Survivors of the Wrecked Ship Lillian Brittane in an Open Boat.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 5.—The following has just been received from Pensacola, Fla., from the copy of a memorandum made in pencil by part of the crew of the British ship Lillian lost the 15th of January, 1871, off the coast of Brazil and picked up in the Gulf of Mexico. It may be a hoax, but if not it is of so much importance as to be thought worthy of publication.

Signed C. L. LE BARON.

OFF EAST COAST BRAZIL, Jan. 21, 1871.

This is to certify we three are the only survivors of the English ship Lillian, lost on the night of the 15th this month. We have now been drifting in an open boat for six days, suffering hunger, thirst and hardships, which none but those that has experienced can illustrate. We have been looking out for a sail since ship went down. What became of Captain and rest men, God can only tell.

English Crews En Route for Saratoga—Sadler not Unwilling to Row Brown of Halifax—A Regatta at Hamilton Proposed.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 5.—The Tyne and Taylor Winship crews, with their boats, from Halifax, and the American crew from St. John, passed through Boston today en route to Saratoga.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 5.—SADLER publishes a card denying that he has refused the challenge offered him by BROWN's backers, to row a single-scull race for from $1,000 to $10,000 over the same course as of the champion race, and declares his willingness to meet BROWN in any of the races for which their crews are entered. The Barton crew of Halifax will probably leave today for Saratoga. They have challenged the Prior crew to row over the Halifax course for $500.

HAMILTON, Canada, Sept. 5.—Steps are being taken to hold a regatta on the bay at this place. A letter has been received from the Taylor-Winship crew stating that they would come and row for $1,000. The Rowing Club has taken the matter in hand, and the prospects are good for raising the necessary funds. It is thought the St. John crew will row here.

THE INDIANS.

Col. Boudinot's Plan of Providing for the Cherokees.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 5.—Col. BOUDINOT, of the Cherokee Nation, in a recent letter to the Van Buren Press, defines his position regarding the affairs of that nation. He says:

"The proper policy to pursue in the premises will be the passage of an act by Congress to secure to the Indians of this Territory, first, one hundred and sixty acres of selected land for every man, woman and child; second, that the balance of the land be sold to actual settlers; third, that the $1,000,000 Cherokee Fund be devoted to the interest and support of orphans, who; fourth, that the interest on the balance be divided per capita every year; fifth, that United States Courts be established in the Indian country, juries of Indians to try Indians; sixth, an Indian delegate in Congress to take the place of the expensive delegations, thereby saving the nation $15,000 per year. All this Congress has the authority of the Treaty of 1866 to do, and I am in favor of it."

The New-England Fair—A Successful Exhibition—Trotting.

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 5.—The opening day of the New-England Agricultural Fair sustains the predictions that it would be the most successful ever held in this section. Several thousand people attended. The grounds cover over forty acres, with an exhibition building 110 by 80 feet, three stories high, lighted with gas, and furnished with all the conveniences. There are 260 stables for horses, and pens to accommodate about 700 cattle. There are also seventy-five covered pens for sheep and fifty-eight pens for swine. An abundance of good water is furnished from the hydrants of the Locks and Canal Company. Two trots took place this afternoon. Lawlessness in Missouri—Three Men Killed by Desperadoes.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 5.—At Bloomfield, Mo., on Sunday last, a man named HANNA, was sought by a band of armed and masked men. He took refuge in the house of his son-in-law, a Mr. SNEIDER, previously calling for the assistance of some friends. When the band approached the house they were fired upon, and JAKE BROWN, a Mr. BIDDOX, and a Mr. DRUMMONDS were killed, and another man, whose name is unknown, was wounded. HANNA is said to be a desperado who has figured in some half dozen shooting affairs. He openly runs an illicit distillery, and boldly defies the United States Marshal and his deputies, threatening to shoot any officer who attempts to interfere with his property. The better class of citizens have no sympathy with these lawless men, and demand the arrest and speedy punishment of the persons engaged in this last affair, intimating that unless the law is enforced other means will be resorted to.

Brutal Assault by Street Rowdies.

At 7½ o'clock last evening, as THOMAS FINNELLY, with Alderman MULLIGAN and his family, just returned from the Nicholas Judge Association picnic, were passing the corner of Thirty-fourth-street and Eleventh-avenue, the former was struck on the head by a paving-stone hurled by MICHAEL LOONAM, alias "Mike, the Tar." The wounded man dropped senseless to the ground, and, in an apparently dying condition, was carried by his friends to his residence, at No. 395 Eighth-avenue.

Dr. GRISWOLD pronounced the injuries to be of a serious and possibly fatal character. Mrs. MULLIGAN had asked LOONAM why he assaulted FINNELLY, whereupon a drunken ruffian, named JOHN GILLESPIE, who was with LOONAM, brutally kicked her in the abdomen. She fell to the pavement, and was carried home in great agony. Both LOONAM and GILLESPIE were arrested.

THE STORY OF A WRECK.

A Graphic Account of the Loss of the Steam-Ship Mississippi—Harrowing Scenes on Board—The Passengers Plundered by the Crew.

As previously stated, the steam-ship Mississippi, Capt. W. P. HENRY, which left this City for New-Orleans on the 19th ult., was totally wrecked on the coast of Florida in a terrific gale on Thursday night, Aug. 24. The passengers and crew were rescued by the steamer Cortes, Capt. WHITMAN, who, when appealed to for assistance, sent word that he "would wait all night, if necessary, and take all hands off." Capt. W. P. HENRY has made to his New-Orleans agents a long and detailed account of the disaster, in which he says: "I left on shore, to take care of the property, the mate, engineer, and some of the crew, until my return. I am going to Key West, to procure assistance, return to the ship and save all I can. The ship is broken in two on her starboard side, amidships, from rail to the water. She is full of water aft, and never can be gotten off. The conduct of Capt. WHITMAN was most noble. He has treated every one of us in the most humane and generous manner, giving up his quarters and clothing to us all. To describe to you correctly the force of this storm is totally impossible. I have spent eighteen years at sea, and have experienced hurricanes and typhoons in all quarters of the globe, but this one was the most fearful I have ever been in."

The New-Orleans Times has procured from Mr. E. A. MALMADO, a passenger, a graphic story of the terrible scenes on board, the privations and alarm of the passengers, the courage and efficiency of the wounded Captain, the outrageous thieving by a portion of the crew, and, finally, the general joy and gratitude when their safety was assured by the action of Capt. WHITMAN, from which we quote freely as follows:

"The passengers, who turned in on Wednesday evening confidently expecting a continuance of the second calm, were awakened on Thursday morning by the increasing roughness of the sea, and the consequent rolling of the vessel. At about 8½ o'clock on Thursday morning we passed Jupiter Light-house. At noon, the wind still being on the increase, the square-sails were furled. At this time the ship was rolling fearfully; the yards frequently touching the sea. Vast bodies of water were constantly being shipped, keeping the decks flooded. At 3 P. M. the storm had increased to a fearful hurricane. The sea was running mountain-high, and the wind whistling through the rigging so as to make it almost impossible to make one's self heard. At about 4 P. M. we shipped a huge sea over the bows, which broke through the rear skylight, flooding the cabin with water. The cabin passengers, although realizing the ferocity of the storm, had tried to preserve their equanimity; but now, seeing one of the skylights broken open, they commenced to be terrified. The water which had dashed over into the cabin was soon met by some passengers and stewards, and a wide plank nailed over the opening. The pitching and rolling of the ship was now so constant and severe, that, to avoid being dashed from one side to the other, it was necessary to hold on with all one's strength to some part of the state-rooms or cabin. The plank which had been nailed against the broken skylight was quickly torn away by the force of the wind, and every stern wave that was shipped would pour down more or less water into the cabin. At 5 o'clock the pilot-house was broken up on the weather side, and the tiller lashed down. The lee boats were torn away by the water, the davits mapping like reeds. Just at this time an awful cry went up from every passenger in the skylight, dashing one of the boats on the weather side over the main saloon, and sending large quantities of water down the engine-room. The cabin passengers, already in a state of terror, were immediately after this startled by successive shrieks, which proved to be the steerage passengers, who had been driven into the main saloon, as being the safest place, and who, in rushed frantically into the cabin, almost mad with fear. Everything now indicated that the ship was about to go down. All knelt and offered up a fervent prayer to the Almighty to save us from the horrible death. A huge wave washing down the engine-room, forced the engineers and firemen from their post, and dashing against Capt. HENRY, who was cutting away the drag, which had struck the screw, dislocated his arm. All the lights in the cabin were put out by this sea, and we found ourselves in perfect darkness, struggling to get out of the water, which was getting higher in the saloon every minute. Capt. HENRY now dragged himself along the deck, and looking down into the darkness, hailed the passengers, asking whether they were still there. Some one answered, 'Aye, aye, Captain; what shall we do?' 'Stay where you are,' shouted the Captain, 'and hold fast.' One of the stewards managed to relight one of the lamps, and hung it up. In order to keep it from again going out, a passenger held it with one hand, while with the other he grasped the bench for support. The officers were making preparations to cut away the mainmast, when, at about 6 o'clock, with a shock, which can only be compared to that of an earthquake, the ship struck on the Florida rocks.

The passengers, unaware of our proximity to the shore, naturally inferred that the Mississippi had broken up, and three or four successive waves dashing over into the filling up the cabin, served to confirm the horrible idea in our thought. Each one told his neighbor good-by, and prepared for the end, which we thought had come. The vessel, being now a wreck, the officers and crew came aft into the cabin to provide themselves with life-jackets and lashings. The passengers had long since been provided with life-preservers. The officers were immediately surrounded by the terrified passengers, who were anxious to know the worst. They were told that the ship had been dashed on the rocky beach, and that their only reliance now was in the great strength of the vessel, which, being all iron, might outlive the fury of the hurricane. At this awfully solemn moment one of the crew proceeded somewhere to a demijohn of whiskey, and commenced drinking himself and handing the liquor to the other men. As soon as Capt. HENRY discovered this he seized the demijohn, and jerking it with his injured arm from the ruffian, poured the contents on the floor. The crew now slunk off in different directions, some going into the fore and aft of the room, while others went into the passengers' state-rooms, pretending to be exhausted with fatigue, while in reality they were ransacking the carpet-bags and packages of the unfortunate passengers.

The ship, after striking, careened to the lee side, at an angle of nearly forty-five degrees, and as nearly every other wave washed into the saloon, the water on the lee side was getting so high fears were now entertained by the officers that she might capsize. Rafts were now formed, composed of the crew and some of the passengers, for bailing her out, which was kept up without intermission until daylight. Enormous waves dashed against the ship almost every minute, lifting her up as though the immense mass of iron was but a toy, and then dashing her down against the rock with a horrible grating sound, which seemed to shake every bolt and rivet from its place. And so this long, horrible night dragged slowly along. Occasionally some one would make an effort to see if a sail was in view, but a wide, dreary, gray sea seemed one solid, undistinguishable mass, and to see the land through the pitchy darkness was impossible.

Pen cannot describe, nor imagination picture, the horrors of such a night. And when, just at daylight, the Captain going forward, and discovering the successive waves, that the ship had been beached within a short distance of land, reported the same to the exhausted passengers and the certainty of being able to save every one, a fervent 'Thank God!' was uttered on all sides, and women, children and strong men wept for joy. The hurricane, at daylight, blowing in squalls, indicated that it had passed its height. Two seamen were let down the side of the ship with a strong rope, with which they managed to get ashore through the breakers. This rope they made fast to the shore, and on it was then attached what is called a bosun's chair, which consists of a plank just large enough to sit on, with a rope attached to each side, meeting over the head on a block, which block slides along the large hawser. The first mate, Mr. CUZZINS, then came back to the cabin and announced to the female passengers that they were ready to put them ashore.

Some could hardly realize that they were really saved from the storm. The scene really baffled description. From the depths of despair and the threshold of death, they felt themselves saved by the hand of Providence, and were once again to tread God's green earth. Holding on to the wrecked mainmast and the bulwarks that were now carried away, they crawled along the deck, through the spray and rain to the forecastle, and thence were carried over the breakers, one by one, by means of the boatswain's chair. The male passengers were next landed, and then the crew, the first mate next, and finally the Captain. A tent was sent ashore, and pieces of wood-work and oars, with which a tent was improvised over some low stunted trees on the bank. The passengers, exhausted from constant anxiety and exposure, and wet to the skin, crawled under the tent, some sinking immediately into a deep sleep, while the more robust lent what assistance they could to the crew. Some blankets were next gotten off and distributed, and then some cold provisions, which were greedily devoured, as no one had eaten anything during the long dismal hours of the storm. Nearly the entire day had been consumed in getting off the passengers and crew, and as nightfall the hurricane had swept past us and the waves were once more calm; still, the scene on the beach was desolate, indeed. Immediately before us stood the ill-fated Mississippi, leaning on her side, firmly imbedded in the rock and sand—a noble looking wreck. Behind and on both sides of us nothing was to be seen but sand and briars and stunted trees. A large bonfire was lighted, and then every one tried to find the driest place possible under the tent to rest their wearied limbs. So passed Friday.

At daylight on Saturday we were all up. Very few had escaped without some cut or bruise, so that after sleeping on the wet bedding, stiffness and lame were to be seen on all sides. The mates, with some of the men, were again sent on board, and during the day continued to send off provisions and other stuff from the wreck. Two of the small boats were still left unhurt, and these were lowered and hauled ashore. The Captain's chart being brought off we were found to be at Hillsboro Inlet, about forty-three miles south of Jupiter. The inlet, which ran immediately behind our camp, was found to contain fresh water, which relieved us of great anxiety. Some fish were washed ashore and fried, and crabs seemed to be plentiful in the lagoon, which also swarmed with alligators. All the passengers' trunks had been washed overboard from off the hatchways, where they were kept, and very few escaped with more than the suit they had on, and what few articles they could pick up out of the water in the state-rooms. At 12 o'clock on Saturday we had our dinner served out to us, consisting of flapjack and salt pork. About this time a report was brought in that a sail was in sight to the southward. This proved to be unfounded. During the day, those of the passengers who had been fortunate enough to save any wearing apparel, employed themselves in drying them on the beach, while others strained their eyes in vain along the horizon, like Enoch Arden, 'ship-wrecked sailors waiting for a sail.'

Just about 5 o'clock a sail was discovered to the northward, which, in a short time, proved to be a steamer. One of the small boats was immediately launched, and the mate was sent off to request the Captain of the approaching steamer to land him at Sand Key, that he might return to us with assistance. By the time the mate returned from the steamer it had already grown dark. He reported the steamer to be the Cortes, Capt. WHITMAN, which steamer had left New-York on the same evening as the Mississippi, and had successfully weathered the hurricane. Capt. WHITMAN, like the whole-souled sailor, that he is, sent word for the Captain back, and sent word to Capt. HENRY that he would not leave us on the desolate shore in our wretched condition, but would send his own boats to assist in taking us off, and if necessary would wait all night until every man, woman and child had been safely transferred to the Cortes. The poor passengers, on hearing the manly and generous offer, were wild with delight. Their little bundles were soon packed up and everything prepared to get the females off first. The first boat-load was swamped in the surf, and had to be drawn up on the beach and bailed out before she could be put off again. The second time it succeeded in riding the breakers and got safely off. Boats were kept going from the Cortes to the shore, until every one of the passengers of the Mississippi, and those of the crew who wished to go to New-Orleans, were landed on board, which was finally accomplished at about midnight. REPUBLICAN FRANCE.

The National Character—Movements of Imperialists—Possibility of a Restoration—The Future—Gambetta at Versailles—Program of the Trinitarians—Lockers-On in Court—Opposition to M. Thiers—Metropolitan Gossip.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Aug. 18, 1871.

Any one who has lived long in France cannot fail to understand the intense desire of every Frenchman to make others talk about him, or to bring his name, in some way or other, prominently before the public. This desire comes from a thorough knowledge of the French character. I doubt if there ever lived a people so easily influenced by public gossip, or so readily controlled by popular opinion. During the past few days we have had some excellent examples of this national trait. The Imperialists are beginning to make themselves the subjects of familiar talk, and the effect upon the public mind is immediately apparent. During the past few days I have heard several men say that they greatly preferred the Empire to this uncertain state, which can offer no solid hopes for the future, and, since order depends upon the life of one old man, no guarantee that the country will not again be plunged into revolution within a month or two. A contractor told me that within the past few days he has frequently overheard his workmen saying that "at least the Empire was less hard upon the poor man, for there was work enough, and enough to eat and drink." I will not stop to show the fallacy of such reasoning; it is enough to know that men are beginning to give expression to such ideas. I have never been able to follow most journalists in saying that NAPOLEON would never again sit upon the throne of France, for it has long seemed to me, despite apparent hatred of the people for that family, (which really counts for nothing,) despite the Republican victories won at the polls by Republican Prefects, that NAPOLEON III. needed but a fair field—a chance for honest competition—to win another plebiscite. It is by no means impossible, now that HENRY V. is out of the question, and it will become very probable unless there is better management in the Chamber. Meantime the Imperialists are once more brinking themselves before the public. Hundreds of them are living at Geneva, Berne, and Basle, or in Swiss Châlets, where they write and publish documents to be sent to the French people. M. GRAMIER DE CASSAGNAC has returned to public life, and he and his son PAUL are to direct different journals in Paris; M. ROUHER has found a means of getting into the Assembly. On the 15th, the notable men of the Empire assembled at mass, and a rabid Bonapartist, after carrying a garland to hang upon the stump of the column Vendôme, harangued the crowd in favor of the Empire, and was listened to with attention until arrested by the Police. The gossip which these two simple facts have created has greatly annoyed the Government, and the Official gives a weak note upon the subject; but the Government is nearly beside itself at the fact that a number of journals, hitherto fierce Anti-Imperialists, have commented severely upon the order to the Prefects to prevent all demonstrations on the 15th which could in any way be construed as in memory of the Empire.

THE FUTURE.

Thus, it will be seen, the great quarrel has begun in earnest, and there is nothing to tell us which side will win. So long as M. THIERS lives and continues to have influence, he may prevent a crisis; but if he should die, who can analyze the result? Strange to say, it was the Republicans who opened the door to intrigues, and who, in their haste to win, have lost a great deal of ground, if they have not lost all. The proposition of M. RIVET, to declare the Republic and make M. THIERS President for three years, broke the compact at Bordeaux, which was entirely in favor of the Republicans. The proposition is a bad one, because it is based upon the popularity of one man, and not upon a principle. Yesterday was the day appointed for the renewal of the discussion of the two propositions, but M. THIERS managed to get another delay by holding out some hope of compromise, not from himself, but from the two parties. In one bureau he said that the Right was preparing a compromise he had heard; in another it was the Left which was preparing to arrange matters; and, on the whole, he was satisfied that the matter had better stand over. Several Ministers, and many Deputies, in view of the great danger of the moment, begged M. THIERS to find some terms of conciliation. "Not I," he replied; "I would never take the initiative in so serious a matter. If they want to bring on a crisis let them take the responsibility." The matter was deferred in the Chamber until Monday, I hear, and the Left, frightened at its own act, is trying to find some way of compromise. GAMBETTA has given his voice against the proposition, as a blow at the Republic, yet it comes from the "pure" Republicans of the extreme left.

GAMBETTA AT VERSAILLES.

Speaking of GAMBETTA reminds me of an incident which occurred when this matter was up. Leaving his seat, GAMBETTA went into the aisle and there grew excited like M. LANGLOIS, cried out words which were lost in the noise, and shook a roll of paper in his hand at the President. A moment after the noise ceased, and all eyes turned upon a little, round man, with a face as red as a lobster, who was gesticulating and trying so intently that he did not observe the silence. "It's unconstitutional," "it's a blow at the Republic," "hi—hi!" and a yell, accompanied with a number of monkey shines. The Deputies had nearly all turned in time to see that this was GAMBETTA's most devoted follower and admirer, and to observe GAMBETTA himself turn away with a sneer of disgust. He has been very silent since he saw himself imitated by a friend who was so earnest in his work that he forgot to stop when the house was quiet. Day before yesterday M. le Duc D'AUDIFFRET-PASQUIER and GAMBETTA came into Paris, and meeting in the station, they walked off side by side in earnest discussion. The Duc forgot his carriage, GAMBETTA forgot to call a cab. The conversation ran upon one point—the course M. GAMBETTA would take with regard to the proposition RIVET—and he very plainly said that he should oppose it, because he could not agree that the term of the Republic should be limited by the life (nor may say) of one man. The Republic should be declared a permanent fact, or things should be left as they are. There is not much doubt about that, I fancy.

THE COMMUNE ON TRIAL.

The insurgent trials at Versailles are going on slowly, and some curious facts have been brought to light. It seems that several of these men were in correspondence, or in relations, with the Government, for the purpose of selling the Commune. As we look back now we can see an extreme probability that if 50,000 francs had been given to LULLIER, he would have arrested Committee and Commune, made himself dictator, and then sold all, prisoners, hostages, Column Vendome, and the burnt monuments, to Versailles. He was, as they say, within an ace of doing it, but could never get more than 3,000 francs to start on. It is probable that there were so many of these offers, that M. THIERS believed in none of them, but it is pretty clear that LULLIER had everything in his own hands for a few days, and that the Commune arrested him just in time to keep from being arrested. He was going to try it without money even, and it looks as if he would have succeeded. Of course if he had not "sold out" as once he would have been done for in a few days. During the siege I devoted several paragraphs to this LULLIER, but do not know that those letters reached you. In short, he began to make people talk about him and grew menacing to the Government of September, which finally arrested him for violent language in the clubs. Beyond question LULLIER has "a screw loose" somewhere, but he is a man of action. He was arrested and managed to get letters of complaint into the journals. The "purs" demanded him; the authorities were accused of intending to assassinate him in prison to prevent his greatness overshadowing theirs, and one day came a letter from LULLIER saying that to escape death in prison, he had accepted liberty at the price of a perilous mission, which none of TROCHU's men dare perform. What that perilous mission was remained a question which greatly interested the Parisians. The question was answered yesterday. LULLIER was released from prison, when he was under charges which bring the death penalty under the Military Code, on condition that he should act as a spy in the ports of the Baltic and upon the German coast. He went and accomplished all that he was expected to do, and came back just in time to join the insurgents. LULLIER's opinion of Gen. TROCHU is even worse than mine. The President had to order him to use the title of General, and he did so afterward, with an accent which made it worse than plain "TROCHU."

WITNESSES OF THE PROCEEDINGS.

During the past few days the galleries of the Court-room have been much better filled than at first, and now it has become fashionable to attend the trials. ALEXANDER DUMAS takes notes there every day, and also two or three other dramatists. All visitors of importance now make a point of dropping in, as during the Tichborne case in London. Yesterday M. PICARD thought he'd drop in, but at the door two bayonets were crossed before him. He grew indignant at first, then tried pleading, and all of no avail, for the hard-hearted sentinel did not care a ——, he said, whether the gentleman had been a Minister or not, he could not go in without a card; and, furthermore, if he did not show a card or go away "one would proceed to let daylight through him." M. PICARD went away. A goodly number of fashionable ladies are now seen in the visitors' gallery, but rather more Arpasias and Phrynes, who manage somehow to get the best and foremost places. Gen. SICKLES was among the visitors a day or two ago. And, by the by, I may here say that there is a rumor in circulation about him, which I cannot guarantee, but which causes talk enough in the American colony. It is said that Minister SICKLES has just paid a visit to Queen ISABELLA, whom he did not know personally, and the effect of this news can easily be imagined. The Bourbon cause rises when the United States becomes interested in it, and there are many who honestly believe that we are about to help Queen ISABELLA back to her throne, by way of first negotiations with regard to Cuba.

OPPOSITION TO M. THIERS.

I forgot, when speaking of politics, the great event of the day. Yesterday the Gaulois gave a piece of news which may be called "a stunner." According to this journal a number of Deputies have held a meeting, at which it was resolved to offer the Presidency to Gen. DE CISSEY, Secretary for War. I said that this might be called "a stunner," but "a feeler" would be the more proper name, for it is a sort of paper balloon sent up to try the wind. For some time the Gaulois has been very hard upon M. THIERS. Today it gives an extract from one of his speeches in 1866 to show how he urged on the war, and made light of the German Army. "An army of 1,200,000 men," he cried, "and who has seen this vast army? One must be very simple to believe that. Why, at Sadowa the Prussians had but three hundred thousand men under arms." And then he goes on to show the impossibility of a German Army entering France, or of forcing back the grand army of France before the National Guard could be raised. It is singular what a difference the use of italics and capitals makes in language. For my part I could not believe that M. THIERS had ever been so foolish until I had verified the extracts. Well, last night a soldier rode up to the office of the Gaulois, to leave a summons to answer before the Courts for some "Crime of the Press," the paper saying that it is to be pursued for a bit of fun, or a fantastic report of a mass on Assumption Day, at which Mme. THIERS "passed the plate."

PARIS GOSSIP.

Paris seems to grow duller and duller every day, and the men who could not be depressed by wars or insurrection, incendiarism or assassinations, are dreadfully taken down by the high prices of everything. A young man on no longer "swell it" on four hundred francs a month, as in times past, and it takes money now to be a flâneur upon the boulevards. Rents have more than doubled,—some are enormous,—yet nearly every house has a placard upon it. All kinds of goods are high. The fact is, that the traders have lost, or imagine they have lost, for some time past, and now, like the Arkansas landlord, mean to make it up on the first customers they have. But, while the prices are high, the quality has grown worse. There is no law to keep these trades-people in check, and without some check French shop-keepers shoot up like a rocket. Gloves are twice as high as before the war and twice as poor. Good boots cannot be had. It is a singular fact that we are obliged to see "French boot-maker" on a sign before buying, yet if any one will find a pair of boots in Paris as elegant and as good as those made by my Broadway boot-maker, I do not mind promising to pay for them. The Paris of former times where people went to live cheap exists no longer, which is probably what the London Times meant in using those words, having in mind the fact that most French gentlemen now buy their clothes in Regent-street, and order their shoes from Oxford-street or Tottenham Court Road. The moral of this is, if you want to come to Paris without a good deal of money, take Mr. Punch's advice and "don't." In the advertising columns of the TIMES I see silks offered on Broadway at about the same prices they are sold here. And as for the hats, Lord bless me, don't come to Paris for them. The present style is the worst I have ever seen, nine out of ten being so heavily laden with fruit of all sorts that they look like the clusters of grapes sculptors put upon the heads of satyrs. Another thing about Paris is, you are sure to be cheated, and one must add fifteen per cent. to the estimates for ordinary swindles. It is a regular business now to make souvenirs of the siege to sell to strangers, and the forgery of pieces of the Column Vendome is as common as the forgery of eggs. You can buy, too, all sorts of original manuscripts, ancient or modern, and all, like Squibob's signature, "known to be genuine because written by one of his most intimate friends." ASHBY.

TRYING THE COMMUNE.

The Burning of Paris and the Murder of the Hostages—Closing Interrogatories.

Aug. 22, Correspondence of the London Daily News.

Yesterday, the first witness called was M. CAMUS, the Manager of the Paris Gas Company, who deposed in favor of ULYSSE PARENT, that in October last he was a most valuable member of the Committee of Public Health, and that under the Commune he received most valuable assistance from the Commune for the public service. In answer to a question from M. BIGOT, counsel for ASSI, whether the requisitions of petroleum in the early part of May might not have been prompted by the scarcity of gas instead of an intention to fire public buildings, the witness said it was true that about the 15th or 16th of May his coal was running very short. He was pressed by the Communists to go to Versailles and obtain an order upon the Northern Railway to deliver the stores of coal which it was keeping back. His mission succeeded at Versailles, and the coal was obtained. M. BIGOT insisted that this evidence bore out his proposition that petroleum was wanted by the Commune to light, and not to burn, Paris. Being on his feet, he took the opportunity of saying on behalf of FERRE's counsel, who was for the moment absent, that the alleged fac-simile of FERRE's order to burn the Finance Ministry was exhibited as a cash-penny production in the windows of SUSAN, the stationer of the Place de la Bourse, long before the prosecutors got hold of it. It was most important for FERRE to know in whose custody this document was found. Thereupon Col. MERLIN and M. GAVEAU simultaneously exclaimed that did it not matter at all how they got possession of the document since it was proved to be in FERRE's handwriting. M. BIGOT replied that the proof only consisted in the professional opinion of an expert, whose habits naturally led him to give the evidence wanted. The expert in question, M. DE LA RUE, is a living skeleton, over seventy, and is well known as an old hand in French Courts of Justice. The trade he has carried on from his youth is to look at the admitted signature of an individual, and then to say by the rules of his art whether another manuscript attributed to him is in the same handwriting. This kind of evidence is entirely excluded from English Courts of justice, where the wisdom of ages in the country of Lord COKE had shown how liable experts in handwriting are to err. The first question put to a witness in such a matter is, "Did you ever see him write?" And if that question is not answered affirmatively the witness is told to stand down. The rule is severe, and in some cases may lead to a failure of justice; but it is better than the indiscriminate credit given to experts in French Courts. Commissary GAVEAU says, in the most complacent manner, that there is no disputing the handwriting of FERRE, because it is sworn to by the expert, adding that "But M. BIGOT raised a genuine laugh by telling the story that M. DE LA RUE, who is well known and much esteemed in the Palais de Justice, once swore in a deposition which occupied twenty folios, and entered largely into scientific reasonings about dots and crochets and commas and up and downs strokes, that a doctored writing was that of a prisoner, whereas it turned out that it was that of a transcriber, which had been submitted to him by mistake. M. BIGOT pressed Commissary GAVEAU to ask Gen. VALENTIN, the Paris Prefect of Police, on his word of honor as a soldier and a gentleman, whether the document "Falsch Number Buanchen," signed by FERRE, was not found by Commissary Le Petit, under Gen. GAVEAU's orders, and he did not see that it mattered, and that FERRE's counsel might apply to Gen. VALENTIN if he liked. It is obvious, that before a jury it would be a very important circumstance that a document, the handwriting of which was only proved by an expert, had been produced by a SPY.

EVIDENCE AGAINST FERRE.

Col. MERLIN, among the new evidence of the day, read the following document, which he said had been furnished to the Court:

Execute the Archbishop and the other hostages; burn the Tuileries and the Palais Royal, and fall back upon Mont Valérien and Gen. Douay. All goes well.

The Procureur-General of the Commune,
RAOUL RIGAULT.

This order Col. MERLIN observed, revealed the general plan to burn Paris, and showed it to be probable that similar orders had been issued by other members of the Commune. M. BIGOT said he was not there to defend RAOUL RIGAULT, who was not on trial, but FERRE was accused of the execution of the hostages, who has been examined before, volunteered to give one more a great many additional details, but said little new, except that the Abbé DEGUERRY, when brought up to be shot, opened his waistcoat, and said to the firing party, "Well, my lads, have at me." This incident made such a long speech, interlarded with studied phrases, and asked so many times to be allowed "a concluding observation," that Col. MERLIN at last cut him short. COSTA, a convict, under sentence of three years' imprisonment for forgery, gave evidence that he was employed as a clerk in the registrar-office of La Roquette Prison on the day of the execution of the hostages. He swore that he saw FERRE in the office on that day—a fact which FERRE denied. But the witness did not see FERRE present at the execution of the hostages. He only saw one member present giving orders on that occasion, and that member was LAGRANGE. He deposed to the clothes of the hostages being thrown each having been burned by order of the jailor FRANCOIS. A tailor, named BODARD, said he asked FERRE whether he had given orders to set fire to the Boulevard Prince Eugène, and he said, "No, I did not give the order, but it is quite right. LAHERIE, a gendarme, a prisoner in La Roquette at the time of the execution of the hostages, said the member of the Commune who commanded the execution was "very much the cut of FERRE," but he could not swear to him. This witness showed great zeal, and said that ces messieurs—meaning the men of the Commune—constantly changed their dress for fear of being recognized. His anxiety to give testimony against the prisoner was so extraordinary in direction that he said the chief who commanded the execution wore the "tricolor" scarf of the Commune. Col. MERLIN did not know what to make of this evidence, since the Communal colors were red.

FIRING THE FINANCE MINISTRY.

A good deal of supplemental evidence, but none conclusive, was brought forward about the fire at the Finance Ministry. A head clerk in the office, who was there on May 24, took part in saving the Grand Livre by throwing the volumes of which it is composed out of the windows of the second floor. At that time the upper stories were burning, and these, he admitted, were fired by shells. But the offices of the Minister, occupied by JOURDE, were intact. They seemed to have been precipitately quitted. A quantity of coupons payable to bearer were found in them, which it was insinuated JOURDE must have brought there to make off with, since it was proved that JOURDE might without difficulty have saved his balance-sheet, which he said he had lost. This witness said he had "heard say" that the lower floors of the Finance Ministry were bedaubed with petroleum, but he did not see any himself. JOURDE protested against a witness being brought forward at the last moments to make such important charges when he had no means of contradicting him. Col. MERLIN wondered that the Finance Ministry had not communicated to the Court important papers in their possession about JOURDE's accounts.

A REAL SENSATION.

After a good deal of monotonous evidence against various prisoners, there came a real sensation. M. LASNIER, a gentlemanly-looking man, with a decoration, describing himself as a merchant shipper, swore that after passing eleven days as a prisoner in Mazas, he escaped on May 24, when shells were falling on the prison. That night or an hour after, he was arrested, and brought to the mairie of the Fifteenth Arrondissement, where he was interrogated by FERRE. He saw FERRE, on the stairs of the mairie, give orders to a National Guard to shoot a sergeant de ville with a pistol. The order was obeyed, and the man not falling dead on the floor, FERRE cried, "Vive la Commune!" and his satellite fired again, and again, till the man was killed. A second victim was executed in the same way. His (M. LASNIER's) turn was coming next, when a firing peloton, ordered out that the executions might be more regular, objected that their responsibility must be covered by the sentence of a Court-martial. M. LASNIER, with eleven companions, were then hustled into a dungeon from which they were speedily delivered by the French Army. FERRE pretended that this testimony was altogether false, but the respectable witness, solemnly and repeatedly reminded of his oath by Col. MERLIN, said he was quite sure that he saw FERRE order the execution, and he could not possibly be mistaken. Nobody asked him why he did not prefer this important evidence sooner.

Bagnes to M. Thiers.

REGERE, one of the Communists on trial, had sent the letter subjoined to M. THIERS:

To M. Thiers, Member of the Academy; Ex-Member of the Corps Legislatif:

These lines, with the information to be derived from them, are not written for the Chief of the Executive Power, whose great merits and high position I, in common with every one, recognize. They are addressed only to the man who a year ago was held in equal dishonor, was as persecuted or calumniated as we are today, and by the same adversaries; the courageous orator whose hand I grasped in the Chamber of Deputies, and strengthen him in the noble struggle he maintained, almost alone, against a doting Government and a furious mob. I still see the band of the Figaro and the Bonapartist journals forming on the Boulevard, with a view to setting fire to your house, and burning possibly all within it. You escaped then; then came the Prussians, the paid agent of BISMARCK, pretty nearly as we are now? Who knows, when the wheel of fortune goes round, and if you do not meet us, what may be the fate which we may meet upon the next crisis! It is, therefore, before the "if only historian," least in few words I desire to tell you that, innocent Commune, as it

There are 55,420 voters registered in San Francisco this year. Last year the number registered was 23,932. The vote of the city will have much influence in determining the result in the State.

The Jackson Pilot expresses the belief that the Republican Party of Mississippi is today stronger than ever before, more compact, more determined and better organized, and that success in the coming campaign is certain beyond all contingency.

JOHN R. FELTON has taken an active part in the California campaign. There are many, in and out of the State, who would rejoice to see him elected to the United States Senate. The San Francisco Chronicle says he "is not enough of a politician to succeed—but wouldn't he make a splendid Senator?"

Col. McCOOK's health is improving, and there is now thought to be no doubt of his complete restoration. But his physician writes to Senator THURMAN that he does not think that it would be safe for him to engage again in the campaign, the labors consequent upon an active participation in which would certainly retard the convalescence now so promingly established.

The Cleveland (Ohio) Leader, which is one of the most enterprising journals in a State which has many enterprising newspapers, has been enlarged, and is printed from new type throughout. The enlargement adds to its recently four and a half columns, and enables it to compete in quantity and variety of telegraph, local, editorial and miscellaneous reading matter with the largest daily papers in the West.

The fruit-growers of Dorchester County, Maryland, complain that they have scarcely realized expenses this season, the chief cause being that many varieties of peaches which usually ripen from one week to ten days apart ripened at the same time this year. Other fruits, as well as berries, have, however, realized good prices. Pears have paid from $1 to $4 a basket; apples have brought fine prices; tomatoes have been higher this season than ever before known, and guinea are already in demand and will sell well.

Gov. WARMOTH announces that the Louisiana Levee Company will at once begin the repair of the levees of the State, and that he has appointed Gen. M. JEFF. THOMPSON, Chief State Engineer, the Commissioner on behalf of the State to see that the contract is faithfully executed. The Company, which was chartered by the last Legislature, contracts to build three million cubic yards of levee the present season, and five million cubic yards annually hereafter, until the levees are in complete repair, and then to keep them in repair for a period of twenty-one years.

A private letter from Middshipman W. G. MAHON to his father, of Cincinnati, speaks of the disaster which befell the United States war steamer Guerriere, off the coast of Italy, between Ovvin Vecchia and Leghorn. He says that the vessel was at the time running under full sail and steam power, when she suddenly struck a rock and grounded. She struck with such force that for three and a half days she was in imminent danger of going to pieces. "If we had not such a good, true ship, and the help of Providence," he says, "all of us might have perished. The Commander, Capt. STEVENS, sent a dispatch to Leghorn for assistance, and the next morning three Italian steamers came in sight to our relief. The first night we encountered a heavy storm, and it is miraculous that we escaped. We had to throw overboard masts, guns, ammunition, &c. Soon after we struck, two large English ships passed near us, and, although we gave the signals of distress, they did not respond. Aided by the Italian steamers, we finally got off, and were towed to Spezzia, where we are now laid up awaiting the repair of our ship."

Hon. GERRY TWITCHELL and wife, of Massachusetts, quietly celebrated their silver wedding on the 26th ult., that day being also the anniversary of Mr. TWITCHELL's birth. Valuable indications of personal friendship and hearty good-will were sent to them by Gov. CHAFFIN, Ex-Gov. WASHBURN and others, and, in a note acknowledging the unexpected testimonials, Mr. TWITCHELL says: "'Tis true this is my sixtieth birthday, and we have been married twenty-five years without quarreling with each other or our neighbors. Silver weddings, we know, often bring friendly expressions and gifts, but in our case, we had, for domestic reasons, decided to keep the occasion a profound secret. How it was known outside of our immediate family does not appear. This fact makes these valuable testimonials the more precious and significant. Your kind and voluntary expression of regard stirs so deep into our hearts that we cannot command appropriate words to express our own grateful pleasure."

An unhappy resident of Buffalo, who has been long tormented by an offensive odor about his premises, and against whom the Health officers had actually commenced a suit for maintaining a nuisance, has just discovered that it is caused by a flow of natural gas in his cellar. The floor of the cellar is the natural rock, and to drain it, before a sewer was constructed, a hole was drilled through the rock a distance of two feet, when an interstice or cavity was met, into which the water passed. On applying a lighted candle to the hole a blue flame instantly appeared, reaching almost to the ceiling, and the mystery was solved.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS—SEPT. 5.

Before Judge Barnard.

A DISCONTENTED WITNESS.

In re Mary Watson.—Mary Watson was brought before the Court on a writ of habeas corpus, and her discharge asked for from the House of Detention. It appeared from the statement of her counsel, Mr. Hummel, that the petitioner made a charge against a man named Thompson of robbing her of $40 in a store. Subsequently, however, she declined to prosecute, and Judge Dowling committed her to the House of Detention. She has now concluded to prosecute when called upon, and on this consideration the Judge ordered her discharge.

A MOTHER REPUDIATED BY HER DAUGHTER.

In re Mary Ann Heffernan.—The petitioner in this case, a prepossessing girl of about fourteen years, was brought up on a writ of habeas corpus, issued at the instance of David R. Scott against Thomas E. Cassidy and the matron on Ward's Island. As already published in the Times, when the writ was issued, the girl had been sent to the Island by her mother three years ago, whence she was transferred to the custody of David R. Scott, in whose family she had lived during the past three years. Recently the girl's mother applied to Mr. Scott for the girl's pay, and being refused, made a complaint at Castle Garden, and claimed the possession of the girl. In obedience to a notice from Mr. Cassidy, Mr. Scott brought the girl to Castle Garden, where she was taken possession of by Mr. Cassidy and transferred to Ward's Island, and hence the present writ on her behalf. Mr. Scott presented himself in Court, and Judge BARNARD, after complimenting him on his respectable appearance, inquired of the girl with whom she preferred to go. The girl was decidedly in favor of Mr. Scott, who, she said, had treated her well, and from whom she had learned all she knew.

Counsel for the mother thought she was more properly entitled to the custody of her daughter than was a stranger. To this, Judge BARNARD replied that the claims of a mother who, for no fault of her child, would send her to Blackwell's Island, were entitled to no consideration. The girl was then discharged, and smilingly departed with Mr. Scott.

In the course of the discussion, Judge BARNARD incidentally paid a left-handed compliment to the manner in which children on Ward's Island are treated.

Before Judge Sutherland.

THE CORNELL CLAIM.

The People ex rel. Cornell vs. Controller Connolly and the Commissioners of the New County Court-house.—In this case, the facts of which have already fully appeared in the TIMES, Judge SUTHERLAND has decided against granting the motion for a stay of proceedings under the mandamus, until a decision is rendered on the appeal.

Notice.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot under any circumstances return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

☞ We beg to state that we shall shortly publish, in a cheap pamphlet form, in English and German, the proofs we have submitted during the past few weeks of the City frauds. The warrants copied from the Controller's books, checked and revised by the official accounts sent in to the Board of Supervisors by Mayor Hall, together with the particulars of the "armorie swindle," and the numerous other frauds committed under the "Rule of Four," will be arranged in a perspicuous and handy form. A totally new introduction in these reports will be written, and explanations given which will bring the history down to the present time. This pamphlet will have a very large circulation all over the Union—over 150,000 copies are already ordered. We can print only two pages of short advertisements in this pamphlet, and it will be necessary to send in notice early of any applications for this space. We are also ready to receive orders for the pamphlet.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

In the French Assembly, yesterday, a boisterous debate arose on a motion to remove the Assembly and seat of Government back to Paris. Sentence of death has been pronounced against four women, by Court-martial, convicted of incendiarism during the siege of Paris; imprisonment in a fortress against one, and ten years' solitary confinement against another. The Paris journals assert that an angry discussion occurred between M. THIERS and the Italian Ambassador over Italian participation in the Gastein Conference.

The Berlin Cross Gazette says that the Gastein meeting it was decided to leave the Roman question entirely to Italy. The anniversary of the occupation of Rome by Gen. CADORNA in 1870 will be observed in that city Sept. 20, with a parade of the National Guards and theatrical and other entertainments.

Strikes took place yesterday among workmen of Sheffield and Bradford, England. That in Sheffield was settled by arbitration. It was expected that the Newcastle strike would be similarly adjusted. Strikes have just taken place among the workmen of various occupations in Brussels. They demand a reduction in the hours of labor. Dr. KARL MARX, the leading spirit of the International Society, died yesterday, in his fifty-third year. The Committee of the Confederate cotton bondholders in England is about to publish its report and correspondence. Commodore ASHBURT'S yacht Liccasa has been aground off the Isle of Wight. She was yesterday sheltered in Portland harbor, awaiting the termination of the prevailing heavy gale before continuing her voyage to New-York.

GENERAL.

An indignation meeting was held at Lynn, Mass., last night, on the recent disaster at Revere, on the Eastern Railroad. Strong resolutions were adopted, and a committee was appointed to go before the Legislature, if necessary, to secure proper safeguards to travel. Among the speakers was Ex-Congressman JOHN B. ALLEY, who in his speech ascribed the disaster primarily to the "negligence and parsimony" of the management.

The Fall meeting of the Rensselaer Park Association at Troy, opened yesterday, and continues several days.

The eighth exhibition of the New-England Fair opened yesterday morning at Lowell, Mass., under the most favorable circumstances.

The Tyne and Taylor-Winship crews, with their boats, have arrived at Boston on their way to Saratoga. An effort is put forth by the Hamilton, Ontario, Rowing Club to get no rules on the bay in which the Englishmen may have an opportunity to row again, and some hope of success is entertained. A card is published in Halifax by SADLER, in which he says he has not refused to row BROWN, of Halifax, and expresses his readiness to race him in any race for which their crews are entered.

What Are the Prospects?

There is now a very fair probability of our securing thorough reform in the City Government. The citizens have always had it in their own power to protect their property, but for some years past they have been too lazy to interfere. They now wake up suddenly to the discovery that the City has been run in debt over $125,000,000, and that their burden is accumulating so rapidly as to threaten the total absorption of their property in the course of a few years. They have not moved a day too soon. The men who were plundering them were insatiable, and had fixed no limits to their nefarious schemes. The whole country was scandalized at the figure which New-York was making in the world. But it is a long lane which has no turning, and we may confidently hope that the most disgraceful epoch in our City's history is about to close. This morning legal proceedings will be commenced with a view to test the legal means of redress open to the tax-payers. The Court moved in the first instance will be Judge BARNARD'S, and people who are disposed to sneer at this had better wait and see what Judge BARNARD will do. Let every man be judged by his present actions, in the crisis which we are now called upon to meet.

One object which we have a right to pursue is to recover the money which has been stolen from the people. Let us get rid of the robbers by all means—but let us also get back what belongs to us. We all know where a great part of the plunder may be found. One man has invested over a million, in his wife's name, in United States five-twenties; another has erected "palatial mansions"—to borrow the World's phrase—in this City and at Norwalk, Conn. The money thus disposed of came from the people, and rightfully belongs to them. They must have it back again, by fair means or foul—and we think fair means will answer. It will be a monstrous thing if the Four Thieves are allowed to walk quietly off with the plunder they have secured. Why should the tax-payers submit to so great a wrong? As Ex-Mayor HAVEMEYER told them on Monday evening: "Whenever the body of our citizens, each acting for himself, shall resolve that they will turn from the avocations of business, discard the interests and prejudices of party, and make an earnest and faithful effort to overthrow the wrong-doers, and establish a reform in the Government of our City, the good results which you expect to flow from this meeting will be secured." Surely the Four have had the property of the citizens at their mercy quite long enough. They must not only take their hands off now, but restore what they have already stolen.

Mr. R. B. ROOSEVELT, whose excellent speech we reprint in full today, tells us he has been informed that the new Court-house has cost over twelve million dollars—about as much as the Houses of Parliament in London, hitherto supposed to be the most extravagant buildings in the world. But Mr. ROOSEVELT also shows that the enormous frauds committed are not the only offenses of our Tammany rulers. "They have stolen our ballots, have falsified the will of the people, and have pulled away the very keystone of the arch of liberty." These are the words of a Democrat, mark you—but of an honest Democrat and a gentleman, and therefore, of course, a very objectionable person to the voters of the Sixth Ward, whom Mr. ROOSEVELT kindly represents in Congress. The rowdies of the Sixth Ward do not deserve to have a gentleman to represent them, but still, since Providence has blessed them beyond their deserts, and given them much more than they had any reason to expect, there is some chance that a salutary change may be effected in them against their will. Therefore, we hope Mr. ROOSEVELT will pay no attention to their demand for his resignation, made under the influence of the chain-lightning whisky which is the natural beverage of people in that part of the City. He must remember that he is as a missionary laboring in a neglected field, and although the natives and other savages may thirst for his blood, and breathe out threatenings and slaughters, it is his duty to stand his ground and see if he cannot lift them from their present degraded condition. He has no right to see his fellow-creatures struggling in the mire and filth, and stretch out no hand to save them.

Mr. ROOSEVELT describes, in a very lucid manner, the means taken by the Tammany gang to suppress the honest expression of opinion at the polls. He alludes to the "cruel and tyrannical interference of the United States Government, under the vile bayonet Election law," at the last election, by means of which "we got a fair vote." We hope we shall see the same sort of interference at the forthcoming elections. The rogues may rave, but honest men will approve of the step. Are TWEED, SWEENY and HALL to go on plotting in the face of day against the freedom of election, and no steps to be taken to defeat them? These men are now redistricting the City—look at their official organ, the New-York Transcript, for particulars—in order that HALL may appoint his own inspectors, and thus make all sure for the usual stuffing, repeating, "ringing," and false counting. What is this but a plot against the rights of the citizens, and against free government itself? And how is it to be frustrated? The private citizen is helpless. The Police are under the orders of the Ring. The Judges meet to obey the Ring's commands. From whence is help to come, but from the arm of the National Government? If we cannot have an honest election this Fall, there will be a revolution not long afterward. Of the two evils, let us choose the least. HALL and his cronies are determined that we shall not have an honest election. There is no possibility of a mistake on that point. They are boasting now that they have "fixed things" in such a way as to secure the next Legislature, and get more money next year than ever. Will the people stand by and see it done? We judge not. Time will show whether we, or the Four candidates for Sing Sing formed the truest estimate of the public temper.

The World on Numbers and Weight.

The World confesses to a little surprise at the numerical strength of the immense mass-meeting at the Cooper Institute on Monday evening, but consoles itself by the somewhat original discovery that "numbers prove nothing, and, if they did, the argument could be easily refuted." It is not exactly clear how an "argument," supported by proof, could be "easily refuted," but the World has so often attempted to refute the charge of stealing made against its employers, and proved from the Controller's own books—to say nothing of its own testimony a year or so ago—that it probably thinks the thing can be done. "Respectability" and "weight," according to the World, are the main essentials to a public meeting; people taking part in it "are to be weighed, not counted," and, judged by this criterion, it tells its readers that the meeting was a "failure." The speakers, it says, were "interlopers and partizans." Men like Ex-Mayor HAVEMEYER, OSWALD OTTENDORFER, Ex-Judge PIERREPONT, and Congressman ROOSEVELT, all of whom were active, working Democrats in this City years before MANTON MARBLE deserted the Republican Party and sold himself to the "Ring," are stigmatized as "interlopers," and men of no "weight" or "respectability."

"If," says the World, "Mr. ASTOR, or Mr. STEWART, or Mr. BELMONT, or Mr. BARLOW, had been Chairman of the meeting, and the list of speakers had comprised such names as Gen. DIX, Mr. O'CONOR, Mr. GREELEY, Mr. TILDEN, Mr. BRYANT, MARSHALL O. ROBERTS and Judge BLATCHFORD, the meeting might have been deemed to be an expression of the best public opinion of the City." All these gentlemen, however, as the World says, "stood aloof," and it tries to give the impression that they discountenanced the meeting. We do not know how the gentlemen named will like to be thus represented as allies of the Ring, but, if we are not mistaken, every one of them, with the possible exception of Messrs. ASTOR, O'CONOR and ROBERTS, heartily sympathized with the meeting, and several of them wrote letters to the Committee of Arrangements regretting their inability to attend. Every citizen of New-York, who was present at the meeting, or read the list of signers to the call, knows that in point of numbers, "respectability, weight, and moral authority," it was never excelled, if it was ever equaled, by any meeting ever held in the Cooper Institute; and this attempt of the World to make it appear as an insignificant, or partizan demonstration, is worthy of the stupidity of Mayor HALL, who still flatters himself that the Democratic Party will back him up in his villainy, and that the excitement will soon "blow over." Suppose the Mayor and his friends get up a counter meeting and test their strength. The World makes the suggestion, and we heartily concur in it. "Nobody can doubt," says the World, "that if the inculpated officers should choose to call a meeting, they could assemble one five times as large as that last night, nor that the multitude would be as strong and vociferous in acquitting, as this meeting was in condemning the City Government." By all means let them try it. Let HALL and CONNOLLY issue their call forthwith, and see who will sign it. We will gladly publish the list of names, and we shall expect to see the call headed by Messrs. ASTOR, STEWART, BELMONT, BARLOW, O'CONOR, ROBERTS, and others, who, the World tells us, "stood aloof" from the meeting of Monday night. Will Mr. BARLOW thank the World for thus dragging in his name, and inferentially representing him as an ally of the Ring? What right had the World thus to insult an honest Democrat, who has already sustained sufficient injuries at its hands? Is it not enough to punish a man in his pocket, without taking away his character too? Mr. BARLOW is no friend of the Tammany thieves, and the editor of the World would know it if he had not sold his memory with everything else to the Tweed and Sweeny gang.

We agree with the World that the proposed Hall and Connolly meeting would be large in numbers, for the Ring has an army of dependents and tools who would be compelled to attend. Perhaps this would be the quickest and surest way of getting at the City pay-roll, which is so carefully concealed from the public. The sinecure place-holders would be alone sufficient to fill the Cooper Institute. Let us, then, have a public meeting called without delay, to "acquit" HALL and CONNOLLY. We will guarantee them a full hearing in the TIMES, with an accurate description of the meeting, and the names and character of the speakers and audience. As numbers signify nothing, we will follow the World's criterion and see that the participants of the demonstration are "weighed, not counted." Judged by this test, and by this alone, W. M. TWEED might be considered very superior to Ex-Mayor HAVEMEYER.

Mr. Ottendorfer and the German Democrats.

The speech of Mr. OSWALD OTTENDORFER, at the meeting on Monday evening, was one of the most important delivered on that occasion. It was the frank, sincere, and deliberate declaration of war by an able representative of the German Democrats against municipal corruption. It will be everywhere received with satisfaction. In the caution advised by Mr. OTTENDORFER, with reference to the charges brought against even the guiltiest of our City authorities, we heartily share. We fully appreciate the danger of reaction which comes after every excitement of the public mind, not sustained by substantial fact. There is nothing strong but the simple truth. It is by that principle we have been ourselves guided in the war we have been compelled to wage against the Ring. We are convinced that no one who has any knowledge whatever of our City affairs now hesitates to say that the TIMES has kept carefully within the facts.

We also receive with special gratification the appeal of Mr. OTTENDORFER to make the work of reform non-partisan. The repudiation of party ties comes with excellent grace from one so pronounced and so influential in his advocacy of general party principles as the editor of the Staats Zeitung. With him such an act is not a mere show of virtue. It is an act requiring courage and fidelity to conscience, and it shows the more clearly how deeply his mind is impressed by the magnitude of the issue now presented. His example and his influence will be felt with great effect among the German Democrats, who will see in it a call that cannot go unheeded to a plain and pressing duty. The policy of generous abnegation of party, adopted and advocated by Mr. OTTENDORFER, must be met with cordial recognition on the part of Republicans. It is the obvious duty of members of both parties to make the destruction of the Ring the sole object of their political action in the coming legislative election; to try every candidate, by whomsoever nominated, and whatever may be his claims to "regularity," by the simple test of his devotion to that end; and to labor with all their might in unreserved unity with all who seek it. Whenever Mr. OTTENDORFER, or any other representative Democrat, can show us a course of procedure which promises to serve this purpose, he may count on our unhesitating and constant support, and on all the influence we can exert. We repeat what has been our unvarying declaration, that in this fight we know only one enemy—the Tammany corruptionists; and only one class of friends—those who are willing and able to assist in putting down those corruptionists.

Mr. OTTENDORFER proposes a definite policy to carry out the purpose to which he has given his adhesion. It is to demand of the conventions of the political parties a pledge that the Legislature shall, immediately on meeting, pass an enabling act by which the citizens of New-York would be authorized to elect a constitutional convention to draw up a new charter, to be submitted at the general election of 1872 to the judgment of the people. We have already pointed out that there is some doubt as to the constitutionality of this plan. It is further objectionable in that it leaves us for a whole year in the hands of our present unfaithful officials, and compels us to pass through three successive elections—one for the Legislature, one for the Municipal Constitutional Convention, and one at which the charter would be submitted—thus running a triple risk from the corruption of the franchise by the Ring. The essential object of Mr. OTTENDORFER is, of course, to place the Government of the City in the hands of the people. We believe this object can be more safely, speedily, and completely accomplished by the plan we have already urged. This is simply to put the Government into the hands of a Mayor elected for a short term, with provision of law by which any citizen could at any time secure the removal of a corrupt official through the action of the Courts. This is a measure which can instantly be applied, and which, at every recurring election, would enable the people to effect, if necessary, a complete change in the administration. It is based on a principle which Mr. OTTENDORFER'S party has indorsed in the adoption of the present charter, and it would prove unobjectionable to the honest men of all parties.

Running Amuck in Missouri.

In a country made up so largely from emigration as our own, it is inevitable that many foreign habits and customs should by degrees be introduced among us. New-York in this respect is gradually becoming a cosmopolitan City. In a few years the foreigner who comes here from any part of the world will find, in the American metropolis, a social epitome of his own land. Already in our midst there is a confusion of tongues that would puzzle a MEZZOFANTI. The oldest language of the East exchange the universal shibboleth of trade with the scarcely formed speech of our modern time. And in our ways of living, our pleasures, our dissipations, there is as great a variety. The Frenchman has his table d'hôte, his bottle of vin blanc, and his branch meeting of the International, if these be essential to his happiness. For the German there are beer-shops and Schuetzenfesten, Turnvereinen and Sängerbunden innumerable. There are Italian maccaroni-shops and Chinese opium-cellars, and no doubt, before long, we shall be treated to a Spanish bull-fight in the Central Park. At either side of the continent religious toleration is typified by a Joss-house at San Francisco, and a Russian chapel at New-York, with the Mormon temple at Salt Lake City as a half-way station between them. And as for "old Erin," everbody knows that it has been tumbled bodily on Manhattan Island.

Of course in this wholesale assimilation of alien usages many have been imported which will prove distasteful to a majority of our people. The election habits of Tipperary are scarcely welcome in the atmosphere of New-York, nor can we altogether approve the sanguinary enthusiasm of those two misguided shopkeepers who lately vindicated their devotion to united Italy by carving one another with sabres. But least of all can we relish the effort of an ingenious person in Missouri to introduce the genial Malay custom called running amuck. Mr. SABIN is the name of this enthusiast, and he seems to have made a careful study of the art in question. His preliminary exploit was certainly worthy of the fierce Malay. Sunday afternoon is apt to be a dull time in a country town, and Mr. SABIN, with praiseworthy benevolence, sought to enliven it for the good citizens of Harrisonville. He could think of no better way than by loading his revolver, sallying into the streets, and shooting at everybody he met. The plan succeeded to perfection, and for a little while Harrisonville was livelier than a Democratic primary. Mr. SABIN first went south through the public square "cursing and swearing and threatening to shoot." Then he turned back and chased a number of person into a building, firing on them as they fled. Next he went into an office where "Capt. WHALEN vainly attempted to pacify him"—an impertinence which the excellent but impatient SABIN promptly resented with a shot. The ball, however, missed the Captain, "but passed through the door and slightly wounded Mr. JOSEPH BUTTON who was on the outside."

This was Mr. SABIN'S first taste of blood, and he was so much encouraged by it that "he climbed out of the office window to the shed which extends nearly the whole side of the square," up and down which he ran vainly seeking a fresh victim. Finally he descended through another office to the pavement, and resumed his heroic career, ordering everybody off the sidewalk, (with which order, we are told, "the citizens promptly complied,") and apparently driving the entire population of Harrisonville like sheep before him wherever he went. Up to this time, it will be observed, no attempt had been made by the authorities or the citizens to arrest this worthy man, and the only effort to stay his murderous career was limited to two feeble and nearly fatal expostulations. The first adequate understanding of the crisis appears to have been arrived at by Mr. JOSEPH BUTTON, wounded, as mentioned above. That stray bullet was too much for Mr. BUTTON'S equanimity. To have been shot at directly, he might have forgiven, but to be murdered ignominiously through a door by a ball intended for another was an insult not to be tamely borne. So Mr. BUTTON procured a revolver, concealed himself in a shop, and after Mr. SABIN had passed stepped to the door, took aim at his back, fired, and missed. Mr. SABIN, with great alacrity and better aim, returned the compliment by blowing Mr. BUTTON'S brains out. Pausing just long enough to pick off another citizen who stood invitingly near, Mr. SABIN secured Mr. BUTTON'S pistol and continued his course, swearing and firing as he went. Presently a third citizen, also cautiously approaching from behind, succeeded in lodging a bullet in Mr. SABIN'S shoulder. It was so small, however, as "only to cause SABIN to flinch a little, and he did not even deign to turn around." Then a valiant deputy sheriff took a turn at him with a revolver, still from the rear, while from the ambush of a shop in front a daring city constable poured into him two charges of buck-shot. This last assault proved effectual, and Mr. SABIN was good enough to lie down and die, to the great relief of all the citizens, sheriff and constable concerned.

Decidedly this is not a custom which we shall care to see extended. Certain modifications of it our ruling powers seem to have naturalized in New-York, but they have not yet ventured on the full perfection of Malay ferocity. Probably not even Mr. CORNIX or Mr. VARLEY could safely walk up and down Broadway for many minutes of a Sunday afternoon, firing as his fancy led him. Apparently Harrisonville might safely reorganize its Police Department, or else instruct its citizens in marksmanship.

"Red Dick," the Bandit.

The mantle of JOAQUIN MURIATA has fallen on a worthy successor. It was supposed, when that famous chieftain's career was brought to an end, that the romance of the road in Southern California was wound up also. The wilds of Mariposa might thereafter, it was thought, be traversed in safety, the lonely wayfarer might venture without fear through miles of red-wood forest, escort was no longer required for the visitor to Yosemite, and the cañons of Sonora and Monterey were to echo no more to the crack of the hostile revolver. The grisly head of JOAQUIN was carried, or advertised to be carried, up and down the country in all directions, a terror to evil doers. The thing seemed to the eyes of sober good citizens, who like to keep their money, and care little for poetry, almost too good to be true. To be sure, JOAQUIN had been executed and his head chopped off, but might not his dazzling achievements stir up other persons of kindred instincts to admiring emulation? And was it possible for gentlemen to walk about in showy serapes, bell buttons, and conical hats and be anything but brigands? It was destined that this question should be answered by no less a person than the nephew of JOAQUIN, the desperado who has now become famous under the soubriquet of "Red Dick."

The California papers say that Monterey County is now the head-quarters of an organized band of robbers and cut-throats under this man's command. He is the son of JOAQUIN'S sister, a very beautiful woman, whose history is as romantic, if not so bloody, as her brother's. "Red Dick's" true name is TOMASO PROCOPIO, although he is also known as RODUNDO and MURIATA. His band obey him with scrupulous precision, and, like ROBIN HOOD, in Sherwood, his sway is despotic and without appeal. The former leader of these choice spirits was one JUAN SOTO. But last Spring Mr. SOTO had a little falling out with HARRY MORSE, the Sheriff of Monterey County. In other words, the two encountered each other by accident in a secluded valley of the Panoche Mountains, when one of the most desperate hand-to-hand fights ensued ever known even in California. MORSE was too much for the brigand chief, who was killed on the spot, and was succeeded, as we have said, by "Red Dick." The latter had previously vindicated his title to eminence by a number of audacious thefts, and, as is supposed, several homicides. Most of these deeds were committed some years ago, although the most conspicuous and celebrated have been quite recent, and since Dick's assumption of command.

In 1863, being then quite a young man and anxious to get a start in life, he, with two trusty companions, stole a great number of cattle from the ranch of a Mr. POPE, in the Arroyo Vaya. The party were traced with their booty into an adjoining county, where they had sold the cattle to a butcher, at a place called Alvarado. When in the act of counting their money, the thieves were surprised by the officers of the law. "Dick" was "covered" by one Constable WOOD, who had a revolver in one hand and a pair of handcuffs in the other. WOOD lowered his weapon for a bare instant to adjust the handcuffs. In that instant Dick drew his own pistol, shot his captor, jumped out of a window, and escaped. Quickly pursued, he made for a bridge which crossed a stream hard by. But other officers were on the other side, and cut off his retreat. Dick jumped from the bridge into the river, and, carrying his revolver between his teeth, swam to a neighboring swamp. Here he was ultimately surrounded and captured; but the adventure wrought two results. It cost Dick nine years in the State Prison; but it also established his professional reputation. His presence of mind, courage, and wonderful quickness, made him the idol of all the thieves and desperadoes in California. Only on the 1st of last March did he emerge from confinement; but almost instantly afterward he ascended to the position he now so proudly occupies.

"Red Dick's" band are said to have a retreat among the mountains that is quite inaccessible. They are all splendidly mounted and dressed, and wear costly gold watches, and are superbly armed. In their retirement they are relieved by female society, and, if report speaks true, enjoy a cuisine not to be surpassed by DELMONICO. Their favorite operation, like that of the old-time depredators of Hounslow Heath, is to stop stage-coaches. Gold and jewels they sweep away without remorse, but often spare other prized articles, and occasionally treat ladies with traditional deference and chivalry. Of course the authorities are anxious to seize these scoundrels, but hitherto they have been lucky and clever enough to escape. Sheriff MORSE, who killed Dick's predecessor, is on the track of the new chieftain, and means that he shall share the fate of JUAN SOTO. But his experience of San Quentin, added to his natural cunning, makes Dick exceedingly wary, and the physical features of the country infested by his band are highly favorable to their safety. They strike from the interior of a circle; and, threading their way by night over precipitous hills, and through bosky gulches and cañons, appear now here, now there, at points a hundred and fifty miles apart. Their career of crime may long be unarrested. "Red Dick," in all human probability, will ultimately share the fate of the miscreant JOAQUIN, his uncle; but none can tell how long he may succeed in averting it, or by how many daring atrocities his record may first be studded.

A Model Police Commissioner.

Mr. THOMAS J. BARR is a Ring Police Commissioner, appointed by Mayor HALL for what that master of polite letters termed his "ancillary" qualities. What these were nobody has been able to discover. A late occurrence, however, indicates that they are of the same sort as the accomplishments which recommend the corner bruiser and the bar-room bully to the favor of Tammany Hall. The model Police Commissioner amused himself the other night by making what appears to have been an utterly unprovoked assault on a respectable citizen, whom he beat severely about the head with a heavy cane. So unexpected was the attack that Mr. BARR'S employment was for a moment or two quite uninterrupted. But with the characteristic discretion of his class, at the first movement of retaliation on the part of his victim, the valiant Police Commissioner immediately ran away. Of course he was not arrested. What is more surprising is, that the sufferer from this "ancillary" outbreak was not instantly set upon by all the neighboring policemen, soundly clubbed, and dragged to the nearest station. Some lingering sentiment of shame, or the expressed indignation of the bystanders, may have deterred them from this crowning outrage.

With so admirable an example before them it is no wonder if the lesser ruffians of the force are emboldened to repeat the exploits of FITZGERALD and QUIGLEY and CONNOLLY of evil fame. On the very morning after this achievement it is alleged that only for the crime of looking at a policeman, an inoffensive man was knocked down, clubbed and thrust into the lock-up. Nor is it easy to see how Commissioner BARR hereafter can pass upon such officers for whom he himself has set so notable an example. Are we to understand that the rowdies who rule us are to be privileged henceforth to beat whomsoever they fancy? Or will the people continue in the noble indignation so fully manifested on Monday night, and substitute for Mr. BARR and his colleagues men whose "ancillary" qualities are of a milder and more trustworthy type? It is a disgrace to be ruled over by thieves and ruffians, and that is our present lot.

MINOR TOPICS.

That feeble relic of a newspaper, the New-York World, sneers at Mr. OTTENDORFER for daring to speak his mind at the citizens' meeting Monday night. It coarsely assails him for having "broken down,"—the fact being that he was compelled to suspend speaking owing to sickness, and declares that he "had no heart" in his work, and "felt himself in a false position." But the Staats Zeitung of the next morning showed no signs of want of heart, or of its editor feeling himself in a false position. It headed its report of the meeting, "The Reform Agitation—Corruption—Mass-meeting in Cooper Institute—Citizens, not Partizans," and it introduced the report as follows: "A mass-meeting of the citizens of New-York, in every respect imposing, was held last evening in the great hall of the Cooper Institute. When we say in every respect imposing, we do not refer only to the number present, but also to the worthy conduct of the assembly, the speeches which were made, and the calmness from which the meeting was gathered. Side by side with the millionaire, the rich banker, the merchant, the educated man, the journalist, was represented the simple workman, the hand laborer, the retail shop-keeper; a common interest had brought them together. No means of special attraction were employed, no hand, no noise, no salutes of cannon were needed." The World, which belongs body and soul to the Tammany Ring, which maintains themselves in luxury on the money of the poor, would do well to reflect on this warning exhibited in these few lines. The time may come when it will have to turn its coat tails or be prostrated by the storm. In the latter event it will not have far to fall.

It is seldom that a public meeting in New-York is opened with a speech of such admirable fitness as that of the venerable Ex-Mayor HAVEMEYER, on Monday evening. It showed in every sentence the conscientious thoughtfulness of a man of honesty and education. Its positions were taken boldly, and avowed with clearness and vigor, but they were fortified by that sound sense, that candor and deliberation which are in part, perhaps, due to Mr. HAVEMEYER'S German blood, but are in greater part the result of a manly character and a well-trained mind. If it were not an utterly hopeless suggestion, we should recommend the report of Mr. HAVEMEYER'S speech as an object of Mr. CHARLES HALL'S constant study in the retirement which he will soon enjoy. It is a model of what the expressions of a citizen in public should be.

As the testimony comes in regarding the Massachusetts railroad slaughter, it makes the negligence and confusion in the management of the Eastern Railway more and more apparent. It is now denied by the engineer of the Pullman train, which ran into the other, that he received any notice of the accommodation train before in his way. It will be remembered that the conductor of the Pullman train testified that he such notice was given him, and that when he subsequently learned the fact he neglected to inform his engineer, on the inexplicable assumption that the engineer already knew of it. The master mechanic also confesses that only old-fashioned brakes were employed on the cars, and that patent steam brakes would have stopped the train. Every witness comes only to make known additional persons who, by a very ordinary amount of attention to their duty, could have prevented the awful destruction of life.

The present condition of the navy of England is the subject of a very vigorous letter addressed by Admiral ROUS to the London Times. There is a grim humor about the Admiral's statements. He says that the presence of the Construction officer against the condition of the vessels recently wrecked are made after they are lost, and are "musical after dinner;" he speaks of an "Admiral's ship steering straight for the Pearl, and hitting the mark on a beautiful Summer's day with the Captains looking on;" and of the vessels built on the latest models, he declares that if they "are sailed upon to claw off a lee shore against a mountainous sea, they could not rise in time to it, and would go down like stone coffins."

Among the most active of the Committee engaged in arranging for the mass-meeting of Monday was Mr. LEWIS BALLARD. On his shoulders, as secretary pro tem. of the Committee of Arrangements, fell a large share of the inevitable but very necessary drudgery connected with an occasion of the kind, and it was discharged with characteristic alacrity and perseverance.

By a printer's error, Major BUNDY'S name was printed "Major BRADY" in our report of Ex-Gov. SALOMON'S speech yesterday. What Gov. SALOMON really said was this: "I believe it was my friend Major BUNDY, the able editor of the Evening Mail, who last week stated, in an editorial in his paper in regard to this meeting, and while commenting upon the action of the assessed City officers, that from Maine to California the people would watch our whether and action keep to-night, and that henceforth we, the citizens of this City, were really on trial before the American people as to whether there was manhood or virtue enough in us to put down such plunderers. Yes, my friend is right. We are on trial and I trust we shall not be found wanting."

OBITUARY.

Hon. John A. Poor, of Portland, Me.

Hon. JOHN A. POOR died very suddenly yesterday morning of heart disease, in Portland, Me. He was one of the original projectors of the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railroad, and of the European and North American Railroad, and was President of the proposed Rutland Railroad. He was also an active member of the Maine Historical Society, and had been editor and proprietor of the State of Maine, a daily paper, formerly printed at Portland. He was regarded as one of the most robust constitutions in the country. His age was sixty-three.

Karl Marx.

Our cable dispatches announce the death of Dr. KARL MARX, the celebrate leader of the famous International Society in Europe. The celebrity of Dr. MARX is only of recent date, though his life was full of adventure, like all other political conspirators, causing him to finally seek a refuge in England.

Dr. MARX was born in Germany in 1818, and began his manhood as a law student in Berlin and at Bonn. From the year 1842 he edited the Rheinische Zeitung, in Cologne, until the journal was suppressed by the Government of Prussia, when MARX fled to Paris. At the demand of Prussia, he was arrested in France and sent across the frontier. He next found refuge from political persecution in Belgium, and when the revolution of 1848 occurred he hastened back to Cologne and revived his paper. He only remained in possession of the journal for three years, when he was a second time expelled. He then proceeded to London, and remained in that city the greater part of his after life. He supported himself by literary work of a general character, and labored hard in his profession. In 1864 the idea of the International Society was conceived, and to Dr. MARX the organization owed much of its subsequent progress. The Society was originally intended to work for the benefit of working men in general, partially on the trade-union system. It, however, became a purely political organization, which has since grown into formidable dimensions throughout Europe. It is believed by many that the Commune in France was really inspired by the International Society, though the charge has been strenuously denied. Dr. MARX'S prominence as a Corresponding Secretary of the Society rendered him a conspicuous mark for persecution history, and it is supposed that he was the author of the address of the International, which was published in a recent issue of the TIMES. Essentially a visionary, Dr. MARX never achieved any decided reputation as an agitator, and he frequently rendered himself obnoxious to those who supposed to differ with him in his opinions. So far did he carry this trait of his character that it was only a short time since he threatened to shoot the editor of the Pall Mall Gazette for a criticism deemed by him offensive.

The Connecticut Tobacco Crop.

Connecticut papers are now telling a different story about the Tobacco yield. Thus the Hartford Times of Monday evening says: "This is the busy week of the tobacco-growers. In hundreds of fields the tobacco-knives are busy, and by Saturday night there will not probably be fifty acres of tobacco left standing in the valleys. It is the aim of the growers to make sure and secure the crops before the first light touch of frost, which commonly occurs in this latitude, about the middle of September, rarely before that time, and often not till after the 25th. The tobacco, however, is ripe enough to cut, and the farmers seem to make a sure thing of it. It is an enormous crop. Few, if any, preceding years have produced crops to surpass it, in the weight of the leaf. Its quality and market value are yet to be determined; but all appearances seem to indicate that the quality, like the quantity, of the tobacco crop of 1871 will be superior."

THE RECENT STORMS.

Devastation in Ulster County—Terrible Floods—Bridges Swept Away—Railroads Destroyed—Narrow Escapes of the Citizens.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Tuesday, Sept. 5, 1871.

Reports of great damages by the storm of last week have reached here from Ulster County. These seem to have been greatest in the vicinity of Ellenville, where streams come down from the mountains on every side, and have great sweep when swollen by rains. These streams rose to a great height on Tuesday night and Wednesday of last week. That section was visited by a terrible flood in 1869, by which thousands of dollars' worth of damage were done. The streams last week were as high as they were on that occasion, but the damage of the preceding flood was prevented by a formidable dike, which was created shortly after that flood. But for that Ellenville would have been inundated. The Bearkill Creek swept away every bridge that spanned it, and badly washed the Ellenville and Fallsburg turnpike, stopping all travel, and requiring $200 to make it passable. The Sandburg Creek was very high. At Homowack, near Ellenville, Tuesday night there was one of terror to the residents. Minisink rivers dashed down the hill-sides into the canal and creek, rapidly swelling the flood. On Wednesday morning the whole valley presented an almost unbroken expanse of water, reaching from the hills on the west to the foot of the mountain in the east, and in many places the canal and creek ran together for a great distance as one stream, while everything movable was afloat, or had been swept away. The house of Mr. MARSHALL, near the canal bridge, was flooded to the second story. G. PATMORE's house was undermined and afloat. Gardens, fences, cattle, and, sad to tell, were destroyed and swept away. Mrs. LYNCH, an aged invalid, had a narrow escape from drowning. She was alone in the basement of her house, and the water had risen so as to float her bed before she could attract attention. Two men passing by with a light about 1 o'clock Wednesday morning, heard her cries, and rescued her after some difficulty. The Hornbeck Hotel was seriously damaged. Many poor people were stripped of everything, one family, that of the village shoe-maker, having a fine garden, a cow, a pen of pigs, and a large number of chickens, and the entire washing of clothes which hung on a line in the garden, all swept away. The mill of CONDRY & COX was badly damaged; the feeder was washed out and the dam almost destroyed. From Homowack to Ellenville, on Wednesday morning, the valley on either side of the creek was overflown. Valuable meadows were ruined by the deposits of rocks, mud, drift, &c., left by the flood. Fields of corn and buckwheat were matted to the earth, and covered with debris. At several points the stream sought new channels by cutting off and washing away rich land adjoining its banks. The mountain brook, at the head of which is located the reservoir of the Ellenville Water-works, just completed at great expense, was swollen terribly. The reservoir was filled with rocks and sand that came dashing down the mountain. The brook took a new channel, and was for some time stayed by the Midland Railroad embankment. This subsequently gave way, and the premises of several of the residents were immediately overflown, the water filling the cellars and wasting away gardens and fences. The damage to one house and lot will reach $400. After the breaking of the embankment, five streams of water ran down to the canal, carrying destruction in their track. The railroad track was washed away for several hundred feet. About fifty feet of the railroad was washed away also at Harp's Farm. At Phillipsport, the flood was more destructive than that of 1869. The water was higher than it had been for forty years. The Phillipsport stream rose rapidly, and came rushing furiously down the mountain, carrying trees, great rocks, and logs in its course. The mass of this drift found lodgment against the bridge at Morgan's Hotel, and one section of the bridge was demolished, while a huge dam was formed, causing the stream to overflow its bank on either side, cutting great gullies in the road, and doing great damage in its course toward the canal. Mr. NATHAN BARN's place was entirely surrounded by an angry and roaring flood, damaging his premises nearly $1,000. ARCHIBALD CROSSMAN's wood-shed, kitchen and fence were swept away, and his garden destroyed. He was kept a prisoner in his house, with one of his children, for several hours in immediate danger. Scarcely a house in the village escaped considerable damage. The bridge in the rear of De Witt Bros.' store was swept away, and the water rose into the store. The Delaware and Hudson Canal at this place is damaged to a great extent. Three large breaks were made, carrying away hundreds of feet of the bank and tearing up the bottom from six to ten feet. At Lock No. 46, one hundred feet of tow-path was carried out bodily, and the lock embankment is gone for the same distance—both many feet below canal bottom. Below Caldwell's Aqueduct there is a seventy-five-foot break, and the bank of the berme side is badly washed. A short distance above Ellenville, the channel of the canal is filled with the wash of the mountain brooks, and at Bolton Basin a hundred feet of rock and sand have been washed into the canal, and rise above it fifteen feet. The repairs will not be completed and navigation resumed before the last of this week. This will be another serious blow to the Company, as they are already 1,500,000 tons behind last year's shipments of coal.

ANOTHER UNSAFE MINE.

Sinking of the Hollenback Coal Mine—Dangerous Condition of the Shaft—An Extraordinary Scene—No One Injured—Hollenback Cases of Miscarriage.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Tuesday, Sept. 5, 1871.

The Hollenback coal mines, belonging to the Wilkesbarre Coal and Iron Company, situated near this city, caved in with alarming crash about 8 o'clock Saturday night. These mines had been in an unsafe condition for some time, and a few days ago the indications of danger became so decided that the miners concluded to abandon them on Saturday, which they did but a few hours previous to the caving, thereby preventing a horror not second to the late Pittston disaster. A portion of the tools and implements were successfully removed, but part of the mine collapsed suddenly, filling the yet undisturbed chambers with such a powerful flush of air that boxes, tools, cars, &c., were hurled in all directions, while, fortunately, no one was in the mine, and all further attempts at removing them were abandoned. The noise of the mine fell Saturday evening, startling the city, although the occurrence was expected. Six acres of ground fell at once to a depth of nearly 200 feet, generating a terrible chasm, and creating great fissures in the surrounding banks. Thousands of spectators immediately flocked to the scene, notwithstanding the threatening appearance of the banks, but no accident occurred. The mines were nearly worked out, so the loss to the Company is not so great as might be imagined; but the miners employed therein will lose materially, being thrown out of work.

A most melancholy drowning accident occurred at Fairview Lake, about five miles from this city, on Saturday. A family by the name of BENNETT lives near the lake, and a child belonging to the family fell into the lake. Its mother immediately jumped in the water after it, and another child followed the mother. All three were drowned.

The Agricultural Congress in Nashville.

Letter from Gov. Senter to the Governors of the several States and Territories of the Union, inviting their co-operation in the proposed National Agricultural College in Nashville, in substance as follows:

"The Tennessee State Agricultural and Mechanical Association has invited delegates from the various agricultural societies throughout the United States, to convene in this city on the 3d of October next, for the purpose of organizing a National Agricultural Society. While more in our branch of our national industry so large or so important, there is none that has received at the hands of those engaged so little of combined action in its behalf, and believing that a great public good in the interest of all portions of our common country will be accomplished by this Congress, I desire earnestly to invite your co-operation and your old Tennessee present a representation of your people. Half-fare arrangements have been secured with the leading railroads throughout the country, our citizens desire to welcome your delegates, and, in their behalf I extend to you an invitation personally to be present."

AMUSEMENTS.

Theatrical.

OPENING OF THE FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.

The Fifth-avenue Theatre opened last night for the season. A full house, a new play, and a general air of pleasurable excitement did honor to the occasion, and augured brightly for the future. With the opening of one of the recognized comedy houses, the New-York season of 1871-72 may, we suppose, fairly be presumed to have begun. That the event should have been signalized by the presentation of a new play of home manufacture, is a matter for congratulation; and that the author should have been partly indebted for his theme to a popular novel of foreign origin, need not be dwelt upon to his discredit.

"Divorce"—for such is the title of Mr. DALY's new venture—has certainly as a topic of stage treatment, an ominous look and sound. There is always danger that theatrical managers, in dealing with social topics, may be tempted on dangerous ground; and, with the present effervescent, not to say chaotic, state of some sections of public opinion, the theme in question is a peculiarly critical one. It may be well, therefore, that we should hasten to say that Mr. DALY's handling of "Divorce" is remarkably cautious, temperate, and conservative. He advocates mutual forbearance, the cultivation of good temper, the recognition of a high and unalterable standard of duty in the marital relation; he deprecates extreme measures of every kind, ridicules unsparingly the idea of resorting to them on trifling grounds, discourages outside interference with man and wife, and, if we understand him, implies a belief in the indissolubility of the marriage tie. This is very far from the probable treatment by a contemporaneous French dramatist of the same subject, and, we must be permitted to add, in view of some pieces that have had long and popular acceptance on the Fifth-avenue boards, comes to us rather in the character of an agreeable surprise.

Those who have read He Knew He Was Right will not need to have the leading incident of "Divorce" described for them. The story of a swift, passionate marriage, followed by pickerings about trifles that deepen into alienation; a separation, succeeded by open antagonism; the abduction from its mother of a dearly-loved child, its subsequent recovery, and a final reconciliation, are all traced out in the play, which follows the tale with considerable fidelity. There are, however, no little divergence and variety in the subsidiary characters and incidents, and the local color given to the whole is managed with a fair measure of skill and success. There is observable, to be sure, in the context a certain air of monotony at times—to be ascribed, no doubt, to the circumstance that almost everybody in the play is either continually trying to get married, or continually trying to get unmarried—but this defect, if it is one, is manifestly due to the chief purpose of the composition, and was, perhaps, inseparable from it. The dialogue is often quite brisk and smart; long speeches are carefully eschewed; some of the situations are quite diverting, and others genuinely pathetic; and "Divorce" has certainly in these respects, apart from the impenetrousness of its moral, a good claim for support and applause. There, last night, the play assuredly got; and the players, for their, in most cases, creditable efforts, received a liberal share of popular encouragement. Mr. HARKINS, who sustains the burden of the serious interest, is, as usual, manly and earnest. The hero, Alfred Adrosne, seems in Mr. HARKINS' hands to be legitimately capable of both the wise things he does and the foolish ones; and to effect this impression is certainly to approach artistic success. Mr. LEWIS plays the eccentric and incredible lawyer, Templeton Jitt, Esq., very nicely, infusing lightness and humor just where, for the sake of relief, they are needed, but seldom overdoing them. Mr. DAVIDGE is excellent in the character of De Witt, and we doubt whether any other comedian could evoke more laughter in the part. Mr. LOUIS JAMES is by far too sepulchral and melodramatic in Capt. Lynde—a portraiture evidently meant to be a kind of Dudley Smooth. Mr. JAMES should have studied the stage of Wallack's, and not that of the Bowery, to fill out his conception. Of the detective, Mr. Burrill, Mr. LEMOYNE gives rather a nondescript, and unsatisfactory idea, and Mr. CHIPP is tolerable in the young clergyman, Harry Duncan. Miss FANNY MORANT, an artist in all she undertakes, apparently does all that can be done with Mrs. Tom Pratt; and, always remembering that exception is to be taken to their parts as representative educated young ladies, Miss FANNY DAVENPORT and Miss CLARA MORRIS are clever and acceptable as the matron's two daughters. Miss LINDA DEITZ is as dainty and comely as can be desired in Grace, and shows laudable improvement in her profession. Mrs. GILBERT is, as usual, most satisfactory as Mrs. Kemp, and Miss IDA VERANCE, a new face here, is remarkably assigned as Kitty Crochet.

"Divorce" conspicuously disregards the unities. That of action is excusably dealt with, but time and place are treated with the strictest nonchalance. From New-York to Long Island is perhaps no great jump, or even from the Metropolis to "up the Hudson;" but to Florida is rather further, and back again to New-York rather strains the limits of dramatic license. It is, however, fairly to be said for Mr. DALY, apart from the fact of these anomalies being so common, that he shows abundant ingenuity in so arranging most of his incidents as to make them bear a plausible relation to the main design, and so to appear rational components of the whole. The division of the play into five acts has the advantage of allowing the stage to be handsomely set five times; but, so far as we can see, no other. In spite of HORACE and old-fashioned practice, this division is purely arbitrary, and when "climaxes" have to be manufactured simply to "bring down the curtain"—when they are extraneous, that is to say, and have no natural or needful relation to the fable—the effect is neither pleasing nor artistic. The first two acts dragged wearily last night. It was clear the piece would be better were they compressed into one; and there were other indications that three acts rather than five would have been the more judicious distribution. The main faults to be found in "Divorce" are, however, esthetic rather than either structural or moral ones. We are compelled to censure in it what we have censured before in other home-made plays—i. e., the fact that persons whom we are expected to consider well educated, and as moving in good society, sometimes talk and behave as well-educated people in good society can, by no possibility, talk and behave, and therefore lead us to a painful apprehension of either ignorance or misrepresentation on the part of the author. We cannot admit that educated American young ladies habitually employ such forms as "awful mad" in the sense of "very angry," that they as a matter of course transpose "shall" and "will," or "should" and "would," and indulge in similar eccentricities of speech pardonable only under circumstances to which such young ladies are not usually subjected. Again, the conduct of Mrs. De Witt is simply incredible. No woman outside Bedlam could behave as she does, and the force of the author's picture is here, as it frequently is elsewhere, gravely impaired by its running into caricature. The same observation applies to the divorce lawyer, Templeton Jitt, Esq. There may be a great many knaves at the New-York Bar, but surely there is no such fool. If it be said that high coloring is needful for effect, we reply that natural coloring, properly handled, produces the best possible effect, and that the distinction in just that which separates the artist from the bungler. It must be further objected that "Divorce" contains far too much verbiage, close as much of the dialogue is, and that the play would be a great deal the better for judicious "cuts."

For all these trifling blemishes, "Divorce" combines many of the elements of an effective acting play. Very beautifully placed upon the stage, it was, we repeat, heartily received, and we do not doubt it will draw capital houses for a long time to come to what Mr. DALY's praiseworthy tact, energy, and enterprise have made one of the best-liked theatres in the City.

MATTERS AT WOOD'S.

Miss LUCILLE WESTERN is now filling an engagement at Wood's Museum. She has commenced operations, of course, in "East Lynne." Mr. J. A. HERNE acts with the lady, and his performance and her own have been so often written of in these columns that a record of their repetition is all that is called for.

THE ARTISTIC INVASION.

The invasion of artists continues. Night before last, Mr. RULLMAN and his orchestra arrived. Yesterday morning, Mr. TOM KARL, the new tenor of Mme. PAREPA-ROSA's English opera troupe, landed from the steam-ship City of Washington. Mr. KARL comes from Milan, where he recently fulfilled a very successful engagement. By the Cuba, due this afternoon, Mlle. CARONI and ZAMIRI are awaited. Herr WACHTEL is also looked for today.

NEWCOMB & ARLINGTON'S MINSTRELS.

The Twenty-eighth-street Opera-house was opened to the public on Monday evening. The occasion was marked by a crowded auditorium and by an excellent entertainment. The mirth and music of a minstrel performance never lose their power of attractiveness and pleasure-giving, and that supplied by Messrs. NEWCOMB & ARLINGTON's company is full of the much-prized qualities. We do not know that a recapitulation of the fanciful titles given to the acts making up the representation would enlighten the reader as to their interest. We shall, we think, be explicit enough when we note that the night's work is divided into two portions, the first filled by instrumental and vocal music, and the second by a miscellany of droll scenes, speeches, banjo tunes and dances. A capital company is clustered about Messrs. NEWCOMB & ARLINGTON, and when we mention the names of Messrs. PERRY, STANDISH, WAYTOR, BRYANT and STAM, PRICE, we are cashed we eloquently commend the up-town opera-house to the favors of the admirers of modern minstrelsy.

THE PARIS PAVILION.

The little ones of Brooklyn, and the larger folk for whom scenes in the arena still have the charm they possessed in early years, may be reminded that a very fine entertainment after the approved fashion is now offered nightly and daily by Mr. DAN RICE, in his Paris Pavilion. Mr. RICE's circus is fitted up in admirable style, and his company is very strong in talent and in numbers. Mr. RICE, we must not omit to say, includes himself among the active forces, and is as pleasantly prominent in the ring as he was in what seems now the olden time. We shall be glad if the Paris Pavilion is brought to New-York, but as it is not certain that it will be, even for a brief spell, we advise the enthusiast to cross the river between now and Saturday, being quite assured that the brilliancy and variety of the spectacle in Brooklyn will repay the journey.

SCIENCE OF SURGERY.

The Students' Amphitheatre at Bellevue Hospital Completed—The Largest Lecture-Room of the Kind in the Country.

The new amphitheatre or lecture-room connected with Bellevue Hospital is now completed, and will be formally opened by the medical faculty of the house on the 15th inst. The amphitheatre formerly used for lectures and clinics was wholly inadequate for the purpose, and at the urgent request of many of our prominent medical practitioners, who, without pay, devote their time to the interests of the students, the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction were induced to make these alterations with a view of affording the professors and students a room better adapted for the constantly increasing number who flock to their admission. The Commissioners gave the work out by private contract, and the contractor commenced to make the alterations on the 12th of July, with the stipulation that the work was to be completed for the Fall course of clinics. The upper story of the main building of the hospital was entirely torn away, and replaced by new and substantial masonry, together with the addition of another story and Mansard roof. The amphitheatre is a large and commodious room, capable of seating 500 students, and the seats are very comfortably arranged; the ventilation is excellent, and the light is reflected from the rounds which encircles the ceiling. On the additional story are rooms for consultation, for the preparation of the subjects on which the Professors are to lecture, and for administration of anæsthetics to the subject before it is produced in the arena. There are also rooms for complex surgical operations. The lecture-room is the largest and most complete in this country, if not in the world. The following gentlemen compose the Faculty of the Hospital: President of the Medical Board, Dr. Isaac G. Taylor; Chairman Committee of Inspection, Dr. John J. Crane; Attending Physicians, Dr. R. Fordyce Barker, Dr. Alonzo Clark, Dr. Austin Flint, sr., Dr. Austin Flint, jr., Dr. B. W. McCready, Dr. J. L. Leidy, Dr. Lewis A. Sayre, Dr. Alfred L. Loomis; Attending Surgeons, Dr. Jas. R. Wood, Dr. Stephen Smith, Dr. L. W. Sayre, Dr. T. M. Markoe, Dr. H. B. Sands, Dr. J. J. Crane, Dr. F. H. Hamilton, Dr. A. B. Mott, Dr. J. W. S. Gouley.

The Germania's Sons' Convention Banquet—Order of Exercises.

The tenth national Convention of the Order of Herrmann's Sons was inaugurated last evening at the head-quarters of the Grand Lodge of the Order, in Ludlow-street, by the reception of the delegations of lodges in different parts of the Union, and by a reception banquet at the Germania Assembly Rooms. At head-quarters a procession was formed of about 4,000 men, representing the forty-eight lodges of this City, and the initiation of some of whom eleven were from New-Jersey, fifteen were from Philadelphia, four from Chicago, four from Missouri, and two from Wisconsin. The procession was formed under the direction of Ex-Grand President FRANZ LOEHLE, and with its numerous banners and devices presented a fine appearance. The line of march was through Ludlow and Houston streets to Avenue A, through Avenue A to Seventh-street, through Seventh-street to the Bowery, and thence to the Germania Assembly Rooms, where a banquet took place. Addresses in response to toasts were delivered by the Past President, SIMON HERZIG, Mr. HEINRICHS, President of the evening, Grand President Mr. SCHNELL, National President LEVENSEIN, Ex-Grand President LOEWENSTEIN, Ex-Grand President LOEHLE, Grand Secretary FRANCIS MUELLER, and others. Today, the Convention will assemble for business, and will hold legislative and secret meetings until Friday, when an election of officers will terminate the Convention. The Order was founded some thirty years since, and is composed exclusively of Germans. The Order is named after Prince HERMANN, who in the year 9 defeated and destroyed in the German forests the legions of QUINTUS VARUS, Roman governor. The objects of the Order, however, are benevolence, charity, and mutual aid and protection.

The Disposition of Charitable Contributions.

A novel case came before Judge MORTON of the Massachusetts Supreme Court on Saturday, the circumstances of which are thus explained by the Boston Transcript:

"About two years ago Mr. THOMAS NORTON died at South Boston from the effects of medicine given by the mistake of an apothecary's clerk. The case appealed very strongly to public sympathy, as he had a large and dependent family, Mr. FARNHAM PLUMMER, who knew Mr. NORTON, made an appeal to the public through the Transcript, and several gentlemen aided him in securing contributions. It was deemed best by all concerned in raising the funds, that they should be put in trust for the use of the widow and all the children. With this view a mortgage upon the house occupied by the family was paid, and the little estate by deed of trust was put in the hands of Mr. PLUMMER and the employer of Mr. NORTON, who had been very kind. The house was insured at the request of the donors of a speech being made by him as a delegate of a political meeting of which he was interrupted in the midst of his remarks by a United States commissioned officer, who addressed him some remarks in a low tone, which, as taken down on the spot by a reporter of the New-Orleans Times, were in these words:

"What you say is untrue. I will not permit you to invite a riot. If you are Governor, or as they were afterward reported on the same day by the officer himself to a prominent official of the Custom-house, "You have gone far enough. What you say to these troops is untrue, and I cannot allow you to speak in this manner." His officers resumed in approaching Gov. WARMOTH during his speech was authoritative and imperative. We respectfully submit to you that the action of Mr. CASEY, Collector of the Port, in granting the use of the Custom-house for a political convention, was in violation of law, a breach of official propriety and derogatory to the dignity of the United States Government. We submit that the action of Collector CASEY in causing or allowing the doors of the Custom-house to be barred and locked against the community who had business there, was a still graver violation of law, and of official propriety and duty, and a very great scandal upon the authority of the United States Government. We submit that the action of Post-master LOWELL in using the United States Post-office for the purpose of issuing tickets was an act of the same character. We submit that the action of Mr. PACKARD, United States Marshal, in calling out and arming Deputy United States Marshals to police the Custom-house and preserve order at a Republican convention, was in violation of law, a gross breach of official duty, and a grave outrage upon the rights of public assemblage and free speech. We submit that the action of Mr. PACKARD, United States Marshal, in making a requisition for two companies of United States troops without authority of the Governor of the State, to preserve order in and around the precincts of a political assemblage of the citizens of Louisiana; in stationing them in the principal hall of the Custom-house, and in causing them to barricade, with their stacked arms, the entrance to the hall in which the Convention was convoked, was without the shadow of authority. In flagrant violation of law, an insult to the Government of Louisiana, and a grievous assault upon the constitutional right of public assemblage and free speech; That the action of the United States officer commanding the troops, in interrupting the Governor in the course of a speech being made by him as a delegate of a political meeting to his codelegates, and in making any remarks or commands at all, much more in making those which he was reported to have made by listeners, and by a responsible party to whom he himself repeated the substance of his remarks, was a high-handed intervention of the military authority of the United States in the affairs of a political meeting which is unprecedented in American history, dangerous in its example, and not to be tolerated, an act which calls for instant disavowal and rebuke by the proper authority. Finally, as to all acts just enumerated, we say that we appeal before you not as political partisans, but as American citizens to protest against them as grave outrages upon the liberty of the people and gross violation of official duty, and to ask that inasmuch as they have been committed by your appointees, and in the name of your authority, they be disowned and rebuked, and that the guilty parties Messrs. CASEY, PACKARD and LOWELL, be removed from their positions, and that the acts of the Captain commanding the troops be investigated and dealt with by the proper military tribunals. These requests we hold to be of higher importance than any mere political questions involved, to be of direct interest to all the people of the country, and to complicate in no manner the President, or the National Administration, with either party in this contest. We further submit, as members of the great political party of which you, the President, are the acknowledged and honored leader, that in a political and party view the action of Messrs. CASEY, PACKARD, LOWELL, JOUBERT, STOCKDALE and HERWIG, all United States officials, in driving the Republican Party to a formal disruption, and in using their official power and patronage to that end, is a grievous wrong to the interests of the Republican Party, which is embraced and injured it throughout the whole land, by which they have forfeited the confidence of a large majority of the party and which demands that their places be filled by less unscrupulous partisans and more discreet and judicious men. We submit further that the action of the Convention which we have the honor to represent is resulting from the menacing presence of armed United States troops and marshals and from a locked and barricaded United States Custom-house to an open public hall of the city and there organizing, and to repudiating the aspersions and unauthorized assumptions of power made by the Custom-house members of the Central Committee have been heartily and entirely indorsed by four-fifths of the Republican Party of the State. That in making this statement and request, which we have been instructed to present to you, we speak for the large mass of the Republicans in the State. That if the United States officials in Louisiana are permitted to wage war, with the aid and patronage of the United States Government, upon the Republican Party, as organized under the lead of the Convention which we represent, the result will probably be the loss of Louisiana to the Republican Party, the success of the Democratic Party, and the practical undoing of the whole work of reconstruction in that State. We do not ask the President to take side with either party in this contest. We do ask him not to allow his name and official patronage to be used as it has been for the purpose of a faction. If he will remove these men for the violations of law which they have committed and appoint any good Republicans in their places, leaving them free, personally, to take which side they please in issues of State policy, but only prohibiting them using the United States patronage on either side, we pledge the President that our party organization, aided by the State administration, and unimpeded by Federal officials, will elect both the State and National Republican tickets next year by a majority of 25,000.

The President frequently interrupted the reading of the document by comments which occasioned animated discussions between him and the members of the delegation. In the most emphatic manner he disavowed having given any authorization for the use of the troops. To the remark of a delegate that PACKARD had claimed to be acting under the highest sanction, and that telegrams had been sent to Washington asking for instructions, the President replied that he had received no such telegrams. In fact he was unaware of the troops having been employed until it was published in the newspapers. Gen. REYNOLDS, in his written report to the committee of Citizens and Tax-payers for the Financial Reform of the City and County of New-York," and for permanent officers they reported the names of HENRY G. STEBBINS, as Chairman; WM. F. HAVEMEYER, as Vice-Chairman; EMIL SAUER, Treasurer; ROSWELL D. HATON, Secretary, and WM. E. WARREN, Assistant Secretary.

The Committee further recommended that committees should be appointed by the Chairman on Ways and Means, to consist of ten members, and on City and County Accounts, also to consist of ten members, the Chairman and Vice-Chairman to be, ex officio members of such Committees.

Mr. STEBBINS acknowledged the honor conferred on him by his nomination as permanent Chairman of the Committee, but expressed his regret that the choice had not fallen on some other gentleman who had more time to spare for the performance of its duties. He would, however, sacrifice his private interests to the public good, and if desired to serve he would not decline the nomination.

The report, so far as it related to the permanent organization of the Committee, was then adopted unanimously. On motion of Judge EMOTT the remainder of the report was laid over for future consideration, and the Chairman appointed Messrs. BAILEY, FOLEY and SHERMAN a committee to select rooms for the sessions of the Executive Committee.

An adjournment then took place until Thursday next, the hour and place of meeting to be published in the TIMES of that date.

The Committee appointed to procure rooms for future meetings have secured the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, corner of William and Cedar streets, and the Committee will meet there at 12½ o'clock to-morrow.

The Phenix Insurance Company of New-York.

The assets of this Company are almost two millions of dollars. They have recently declared their semi-annual dividend of six per cent. to their stockholders, and their income last year was more than eleven hundred thousand.

Covering property beyond nineteen millions and a half in value, they disbursed to their insurers for losses five hundred and eighty-two thousand. Established nearly twenty years, their business has been so prosperous and extensive, they could return to their shareholders the entire capital, reinsure their customers in substantial companies, settle all liabilities, and have a net surplus exceeding $375,000.

This in a period when so few similar corporations have maintained their position, bespeaks the careful management of their affairs and the ability of the officers. During seventeen years they have handed to their capital-holders two hundred and thirty three per cent., averaging closely to fourteen per cent. per annum. Their Reserve Fund is over nine hundred thousand. They are both a Fire and Marine Company, and have branch offices in all the principal cities of the Union.—Commercial Advertiser.

Cheap Motive Power on Erie Canal—Niagara Falls Made Available to Move Merchandise from Lake Erie to the Hudson.

To the Editor of the World:

Among the various methods suggested for cheap motive power on the Erie Canal, some seem to me as good or cheap as my own. Having devised a practical method of utilizing this motive power on railroads, I find that it is equally valuable on canals.

I have in the course of an extended series of experiments within the last two years discovered that power can be transmitted twenty miles in suitable pipes with a less due to friction of less than one per cent. With this great fact established beyond a question all the rest is easy. I am satisfied that air pipe can be placed along the bank of the Canal between Albany and Buffalo, exposed to the sun, tance, and at every ten miles attached to reservoirs, to be constructed as ordinary cylinder boilers, and of such capacity as to supply the propelling boats with their charge of compressed air.

The propelling boats may have any desirable power from five to fifty-horse, and tow two to twenty canal-boats. The compressed air can be worked off in engines very similar to the steam-engines of propellers, more likely by other devices, the details of which are not yet ready for the public.

The cost of operating the Erie Canal can be reduced to the small charge for my motive power, and the toll-rates can be correspondingly reduced. The pressure need never exceed 200 pounds in the pipes and reservoirs.

Upon the close of navigation this power can be sold to the cities on the line and used through the ordinary steam-engine in place of steam. I am now building an air dummy to operate city railroads, but the principle will extend to all railroads.

Two eminent scientists, one in New-York and one in Pennsylvania, are now engaged in constructing boats to be moved with compressed air, whose inventions will ere long be made public by demonstration, and I have great confidence that the time is not very distant when the canal commerce of our State may be trebled, defying competition from all other lines and modes of transit, and aid the inauguration of that revolution which is sure to come from the use of this new motive power.

COUNTERFEITERS RESCUED.

A United States Marshal Driven From an Ohio Town Without His Prisoners.

From the Cincinnati Times, Sept. 1.

During the past week, the virtuous indignation of some citizens of Celina has culminated in mob violence, which brought Deputy United States Marshal THAW into a somewhat precarious condition. Within the prescribed limits of Mercer County an organized band of counterfeiters had worked itself into the notice of the United States authorities, which sufficiently accounts for the necessity of a visit from the Marshal. Deputy THAW was detailed for this purpose, and after a fair view of the field, pounced upon the gang, meeting with partial success in securing the leader, JOEL E. BAKER, and at another time JAMES GALLIHUE. These worthies were placed in jail to await developments, when two more, LYMAN SIDENBENDER and CORNELIUS SMITH, were captured day before yesterday. Such proceedings within the bailiwick of Mercer and town of Celina naturally create a breeze, but instead of confining itself to a harmless wind! public opinion blew a hurricane that swept from the wrists of the captured SIDENBENDER and SMITH the encircling irons, and carried their bodies from the clutch of the captor THAW. After the violent storm of Celina's terrible mob had accomplished the rescue, driven Deputy Marshals THAW and GUFFY from the town, and the citizens at last settled down to a calm deliberating over what had been done, lawyers LE BLONDE and HAELEN made haste to repair the damage, and threw a cake to the watchful Cerberus of the Government's rights. In view of this, lawyers LE BLONDE and HAELEN came to Cincinnati with a story to tell, to which the United States District-Attorney gave a hearing this morning, the presence of an interested audience of Marshal TERALL, Deputies THAW and GUFFY, and others.

It is evident that Mr. LE BLONDE is a representative man of Mercer County. From the gentleman's story, which differs in some particulars as to the extent of the excitement, the telegraph reports have been fearfully distorted. Deputy Marshal THAW, we have the following in substance: Mr. THAW was ready to leave Celina for the purpose of coming hither with his prisoners, SIDENBENDER and SMITH, when at one of the corners of the main street, and in the vicinity of the Court-house, a man by the name of SUTTON manifested the purpose to leave to have the same chance as the two confined in jail. Mr. THAW said he would place them in jail at Celina pending the application for a writ of habeas corpus. GUY, whose object was evidently to secure the immediate release of the men, would not consent to this, and received the information from THAW that the other alternative in the case would be pursued in taking the prisoners to Cincinnati. This seems to have been particularly offensive to the officious GUY, who at once, supported by an excited crowd, carried the prisoners away, and applied to the Probate Court of Mercer County for a writ of habeas corpus, securing bail at the time for SIDENBENDER and SMITH to answer for their appearance on Saturday next, when the application will be heard. The result of this rash action of the sovereign people of Mercer is to bring the Probate Court of the county in conflict with the Federal Government.

Although Mr. LE BLONDE labored faithfully to improve the sympathies of the District-Attorney that no illegal proceedings were had in the release of SIDENBENDER and SMITH, from his story it is plain that a mob interfered with the rightful exercise of authority by the United States officers, and compelled them to flee the place.

Cleaning the Markets.

Fulton and Washington Markets were thoroughly cleaned on Monday night, under the supervision of the Ordinance Department of the Mayor's Office, the expense being defrayed from the contingency fund of the Ordinance Department. During the Summer arrangements will be made by the Ordinance Department to clean these markets as often as may be required.

Today an official order will be issued from the Bureau of Markets designating the streets in which market-wagons will be allowed to stand, and the hours when they will be required to vacate them.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange, yesterday, Sept. 5, the market continued quiet, no sales being made, while the only public auction of the day was that at Union-town, N.J., conducted by JOHNSON & MILLER, under the direction of the Jersey Land Improvement Company, particulars in regard to which will be published to-morrow. The attendance at the sale must have been satisfactory, for a large number of excursionists availed themselves of the special train provided by the auctioneers, to be present on the ground.

At the Court-house at Richmond, Staten Island, on Monday, Sept. 4, JOSEPH MCGUIRE, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of GRATZ NATHAN, Esq., referee, disposed of the farm heretofore referred to, containing 21 1-10 acres of land, with the buildings thereon, located in the town of Northfield, Richmond County, and known as the "Trowbridge Farm." The property is situated on the highway dividing the towns of Northfield and Castleton, and adjoining land of James W. Johnson. It was sold under a decree in foreclosure at the instance of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of this City, as plaintiff in the action, and brought $11,200.

For today, at the Exchange, local sales of City real estate are announced as follows: By JOSEPH MCGUIRE, house and lot on Fourth-avenue, between Eighty-fifth and Eighty-sixth streets, and a leasehold property, comprising seven houses and lots, on Fourth-street, Avenue C; by Wm. KENNELLY, a house and lot on Thirty-eighth-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues.

In the matter of private sales continued scarcity characterizes the market, and of property of the class offered at Tuesday's sale, no reports having recently disposed of the houses and lots known as Nos. 209 and 212 West Thirty-eighth-street, respectively for $16,000 and $18,500. Mr. TUCKER advertises a large list of improved City realty at private sale, and also a number of desirably-located residences to let. Valuable improved and unimproved City real estate is in addition offered for sale and to rent by Jas. S. Ludlow & Co., No. 3 Pine-street; J. Simonson, No. 30 West Thirty-first-street; E. S. Principal due in January, 1895, and coupons payable in New-York (or in Charleston) in January and in July.
These bonds are secured by mortgage in pursuance of a deed executed on the 1st of January, 1869, in which Henry Courtlandt H. P. Walker and James M. Calder are named trustees, being the only mortgage lien on the railway and rolling stock of the corporation, and are part of an issue made in conversion of sterling bonds amounting to £610,000 sterling, being the equivalent in United States currency to about $2,100,000, and less than $13,000 per mile, the length of railway being 242 miles.
The gross receipts of the Company for 1870 amounted to $1,400,000, of operating expenses and renewals, leaving a net showing a profit of $602,341 71, or $338,341 71 in excess of the annual interest of 7 per cent. on $1,100,000 First Mortgage Bonds.
The South Carolina Railway is one of the earliest built railways in the United States, and has always ever been managed with care and skill and integrity, and the present condition of the property is that of complete efficiency and good repair. To investors the Mortgage Bonds, with the assurance of their being a first class security.

FINANCIAL.

First Mortgage, Convertible,
7 Per Cent. Gold Bonds
OF THE
PEORIA & ROCK ISLAND RAILWAY
OF ILLINOIS.

First Mortgage Bonds	$1,500,000
Capital Stock	2,000,000

This is a COMPLETED Road 81 miles in length, connecting the important Cities of Peoria on the Illinois River, and Rock Island, Moline and Davenport, on the Mississippi. Davenport, on the opposite bank of the river, is connected by a railway bridge. The last rail of this road was laid July 7, 1871, and the line is now open and being operated with a success exceeding all anticipation. In order to place upon the road the large equipment necessary for the business offered, and to construct depots, car and engine-houses, machine-shops, &c., equal to any of the best old roads in the country, as is now required of this, the Company offer, through the undersigned, $1,500,000 convertible first mortgage gold bonds, which cover the entire property of the Company, and is less than $17,000 per mile. PRESENT PRICE, 90, AND ACCRUED INTEREST IN CURRENCY. Principal and interest payable in coin at New-York or London, free of tax.
This road, opened for the immense local as well as through traffic, now offered, will prove one of the most profitable in the West, traversing as it does a section of country unsurpassed in fertility of soil and agricultural resources, already thickly populated and in a high state of cultivation. This is self-evident from the fact that every section of the road passes through cultivated fields and many flourishing towns and villages, with a large city and navigable river at each end. Railroads in the West have been heretofore constructed through unsettled and uncultivated regions of the country, consequently have had but little local traffic to depend upon for several years after construction. But the Peoria and Rock Island Railway is a first-class COMPLETED road, with NO PARALLEL or COMPETING LINE, and RUNS THROUGH ONE OF THE RICHEST AGRICULTURAL, MANUFACTURING AND MOST POPULOUS DISTRICTS IN THE WEST. Thus it is certain that the local business is already more than enough to sustain the road, while the through traffic is unlimited, as its connections are numerous, which can be seen by a glance at the map.
This road is a grand central link, to which many of the principal lines centralize and diverge to all parts of the continent.
We invite the attention of investors to this loan being familiar with the wealth and resources of the country along the line of this railway and A MEMBER OF OUR FIRM HAVING MADE A CAREFUL EXAMINATION OF THE ROAD AND ITS PROPERTY, WE CAN WITH THE UTMOST CONFIDENCE RECOMMEND THE BONDS AS A PRIME SECURITY, reliable and safe in every particular.
All marketable securities received in exchange at full rates, and bonds delivered to all parts of the country, free of express charges.
Maps, circulars, &c., with full particulars relating to the road, furnished on application by the undersigned, Financial Agents of the Company.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE FAIR.

The Fortieth Annual Exhibition—A Large Display in the Different Branches of Art, Agriculture, and Manufacture.

The fortieth National Industrial Exhibition of the American Institute will be opened at 12 o'clock to-morrow, at the Empire Rink, on Third-avenue, between Sixty-third and Sixty-fourth streets. The efforts put forth by the various committees to make this exhibition excel all their previous ones, bids fair to meet with the success they deserve. The building teems with mechanics and laborers day and night, though the arrangements will not be entirely completed at the moment of opening. The Institute came into possession of the building on the 1st of August, and ever since that date mechanics have been at work making ready. It will be remembered that the Exhibition of last year was held at the same place, when it was found that the space was altogether too limited for the number and variety of articles to be displayed. To remedy this defect, a new front, 105 feet deep by 48 wide, has been built by the Institute, forming a very beautiful entrance, making about 150,000 square feet of exhibition room, instead of 9,000 feet as last year.

The new front gives, in addition to a spacious entrance and vestibule, a handsome, well-lighted room and gallery for the Fine Arts Department, where will be exhibited a very fine collection of pictures and statuary. Many of the best artists of the country have selected spaces for their works, while many gems from private collections are promised, to give additional interest to this department. Passing through this art gallery the visitor enters the main building, which is being beautifully decorated for the occasion. At the further end, suspended from the ceiling, is a large painting representing the progress of the age, while from the arches which support the roof flags and streamers float in gorgeous profusion. Immediately at the entrance a large fountain throws forth numerous jets of water, purifying the atmosphere and pleasing the eye.

The articles for exhibition are divided into seven departments, and each department into seven groups. The first of these is the Department of Fine Arts and Education, and its several groups will include paintings on canvas, glass and other surfaces, engravings, chromos, lithographs, photographs, sculpture, musical instruments, specimens of printing and book-binding, philosophical instruments, &c. Second is the Department of the Dwelling, to which is assigned the balcony space on the left of the main building. Here will be found articles necessary for housekeeping—ranges, refrigerators, stoves, carpets, upholstery, cutlery, &c., all classified and grouped. Third, is the Department of Dress and Handicraft, wherein will be displayed all manner of wearing apparel, for ladies, gentlemen and children, sewing-machines, needles and the thousand and one articles with which ladies perform their work. Fourth, is the Department of Chemistry and Mineralogy, where are to be found soaps, candles, oils, India-rubber goods, drugs, medicines, &c. Fifth, is the Department of Engines and Machinery, where there are engines of all kinds, printing-machinery, machinery for working metals, machinery for working in wood, machinery for preparing fibres and tissues, machinery for grinding and crushing grain, and mechanics' tools of all kinds. Sixth is the Department of Intercommunication, where locomotives, steamships, carriages, various freights, telegraphic apparatus, are exhibited, together with machinery for producing certain portions of these articles. Seventh and last, is the Department of Agriculture and Horticulture. Here will be found plants, flowers, fruits, vegetables, butter, cheese, plows, and a general assortment of agricultural implements.

A noticeable feature of the exhibition is the great variety of machinery and implements which will be in operation by skilled artisans, producing those things for which each is specially intended. A number of Bohemian glass-blowers have been assigned to a prominent position, and have there erected all the delicate machinery required to enable them to produce, in the presence of visitors, those beautiful specimens of glass ware for which they are justly celebrated. HECKER has put up apparatus, and will show, the various processes through which grain passes before it is presented to us in the shape of bread. Somebody else will manufacture pocket-books before our eyes, and still another somebody will make pills by steam. The Adams Express Company has created a nice little compartment, wherein they will exhibit their processes of printing and display specimens of their handicraft. A Lyall loom has been put up, and will make, in the presence of spectators, various fabrics of varied widths, a thing accomplished by no other loom. There will be two saw-mills in full operation, and a pottery, where potters will make pottery ware and bake it in a gas-stove. Wood-working machinery will saw and plane, and match and dovetail wood in many ways and shapes, while a great variety of sewing-machines will run to order. Fifteen different kinds of engines will be running, and will supply the power by which the other machinery will be made to work. A Worthington pump, raising 10,000 gallons of water per minute, will produce a miniature Niagara, with a fall of about four feet. MATTHEWS has erected a gorgeous temple, adorned with illuminated fruits, where he will dispense soda-water which is made in sight of the curious beholder. Photographs will be taken in the shortest possible space of time and warranted not to fade. A number of other handicrafts will be in full operation, the Committees having made a special point of showing to the public in detail the precise manner in which our skilled artisans produce given results, thereby combining useful instruction with pleasant entertainment.

In the centre of the main hall a large centre-piece has been erected as a music stand, around which will be grouped a rare horticultural display. Beautiful flowers and plants, interspersed with everygreens, will lend their brilliant colors and charming perfumes to gratify the senses of the visitors. Ornamental and useful goods, artistically displayed and properly ticketed, will tempt visitors at every step. It has been the aim of the managers to make this the most attractive as well as useful of all their exhibitions, and a few days will doubtless crown their efforts with success. Their expenditures have been very great, and been patronage should correspond with their efforts to please.

The usual practice of giving a variety of premiums has been dispensed with this year, and only the American Institute Medal of Honor will be awarded. This will be given only to the discoverer or inventor of a machine, product or process so important in its use or application as to supplant any article previously used for the same purpose, or at least to work a favorable revolution in some branch of the industrial world. To others, who are deserving of the honor, instead of medals, &c., neatly-engrossed copies of the reports of committees will be given. The Exhibition will remain open until Nov. 4, on which day the awards will be made.

The opening exercises to-morrow will be as follows: The American Institute Grand March, composed expressly for the occasion by KEATING; prayer by Rev. Dr. DEEMS; original poem by WALT WHITMAN; Oration by Hon. E. G. SQUIER; music by Keating's Grand Concert Band.

A KEEPER OF THE PEACE.

How one of our Police Commissioners Outrageously Assaulted a Highly-Respectable Citizen—Particulars of the Attack of Thomas J. Barr on Dr. Higginbotham.

An account of the attack of THOMAS J. BARR, a Police Commissioner, upon Dr. EDWARD G. HIGGINBOTHAM, Surgeon of the Seventy-first Regiment, was published in the TIMES Monday. The following additional details of the affair are furnished by Dr. HIGGINBOTHAM himself, and his story is fully corroborated by GEORGE H. COBB, the clerk who had charge of the office where the scene occurred, and by other eye witnesses:

On Saturday evening, just after sunset, Dr. HIGGINBOTHAM, with his little daughter, went to the office, No. 1,246 Broadway, to send an advertisement to a morning paper. He left his daughter outside on the sidewalk and took his place in the line of persons that filled the narrow office, patiently waiting as one customer after another was disposed of until he had reached the counter. Just as he was about to state his business, a man in the garb of a gentleman, whom he did not know, walked across the office and roughly shoved him to one side. The doctor is broad-shouldered, and six feet high, but he is also a highly-cultivated and most amiable man, and, instead of shouldering the man back, he assumed that the rudeness was a mistake, and raising his hand courteously to his hat said: "Excuse me, Sir. It is my turn next."

"Not by a ——sight," said the man, assuming a bullying look.

"I thought," says Dr. HIGGINBOTHAM, "that he was some rough and probably under the influence of liquor, knowing, as I did, that many of these street roughs here dress in the most expensive fashion, so I concluded I would let the thing pass, and stood back till the man was through." But the man as he turned to go out gave the doctor, according to the statement of the latter, another violent push, and at the same time kicked him in the leg. Dr. HIGGINBOTHAM at this whirled about at once, and pulling his left hand from his pocket where he was feeling for some change, he raised it over his head just in time to catch a tremendous blow from his assailant's heavy knobbed stick, which laid open the flesh of the arm from the elbow nearly to the wrist. Having an ivory-handled Malacca cane in his right hand, the doctor now struck at the man with that, and inflicted two slight cuts upon his forehead, breaking the light stick, receiving meantime two terrible blows from the heavy bludgeon, both of which cut deep gashes in his head, while one severed an artery upon the left temple, which instantly covered him with blood.

The Doctor is an expert swordsman, and was actually driving his opponent back toward the door, leaving him with his broken cane, when the battle was ended by the clerk, who jumped over the counter and clasped him from behind, pinioning his hands, while some other gentlemen hauled away his assailant, who was grumbling and swearing in a furious rage.

If he had been less a stranger in New York, Dr. HIGGINBOTHAM would not have been so much surprised as he was at the information which he now received, that his assailant was no less a personage than a Police Commissioner of New York City, by name THOMAS J. BARR. Mr. BARR was at once taken care of, and was tenderly conducted to a neighboring drug store by Policemen Nos. 1,348 and 422. Officer MICHAEL C. DURFEE marching behind as a rear guard to keep the crowd off. Dr. HIGGINBOTHAM meantime stood covered with blood, which gushed from his severed artery, but no Policeman offered his assistance, and he walked to his home accompanied only by his daughter, with his wounds still undressed. On reaching his home, Dr. HIGGINBOTHAM at once sent his card to BARR, but did not, as has been stated, send him any challenge. BARR paid no attention to the card, and no further notice has been taken of the affair by the law, or by either party, nor is it probable that there will be any further proceedings in the matter.

OUTRAGES ON SAILORS.

Boarding-House Runners—Wolves in Sheep's Clothing—A Home Benevolent Association—Facts Worth Knowing.

Few outside of a small class have the slightest knowledge of the manner in which sailors arriving in this port in sailing vessels are kidnapped by an organized gang of the very worst characters in New-York, and hauled off, nolens volens, to boarding-houses selected by this gang. Few perhaps are aware that an organized combination exists in this City for the sole purpose of driving away sailors from the regularly-established Sailors' Homes in Cherry-street and Franklin-square, where the sailor is sure of finding, as the name designates, a "Home" while he remains in the City.

This organized gang have by repeated acts of outrage and terrorism driven off the runners employed by the Sailors' Homes, so that neither the old nor new Home at present employs a runner, and those sailors who arrive there some of their own accord, after having fought their way through a small army of rowdies, receiving in many instances severe injuries, and in other cases being obliged to leave their clothing and other articles in the ship, as the boarding-house runners would not permit them to take them away.

Up to four years ago there was no organized gangs opposed to the Homes. There were individual runners acting on their own accounts, and as they frequently came into collision with each other, they resolved on a little common cause against the Homes, and instead of acting each person for himself, that a combination should be formed, and each runner receive his share of the profits. To effect that purpose an Association was formed called "The Seamen Benevolent Association," which was limited to fifty members, each member paying an initiation fee of $50. This entitled the member to the privileges of a "runner," which consist in receiving from $10 to $15 a week from the boarding-house keepers, beside $1 for each sailor brought to the house.

Many of the members of this Association are on the pay-roll of Tammany, and many of them, it is stated, have served for some time in the State hotel at Sing Sing. Twelve months ago they passed a resolution that no member of the organization should on any account work for either of the "Homes." The managers of the Homes had not the least objection to this resolution, the character of the runners being such as would reflect but little credit on any institution, but this organized society of roughs went further and maltreated the messengers from the Homes in such a manner that the Superintendents cannot now obtain the services of runners, even at a considerable advance of wages. The roughs having the beast to themselves go to work in the following manner: After the Health Officer leaves the ship off Staten Island she is at once boarded by a crew from this misnamed "Benevolent Association," who come provided with printed cards, generally headed in large letters "Sailors' Home," with the name of the boarding-house keeper at the bottom. These they hand around to the sailors, and solicit their patronage for the establishments represented. The sailor generally says that he is going to "put up" at one of the Homes or at a private lodging-house, but being pressed by the runner, he gives a promise to go with him if he should not go to the place first mentioned. He is then approached by a second or third member of a "firm" of runners, who hands him another card, representing a totally different house, and when the sailor refuses to go with him, he (the runner) generally knocks him down on the dock, either with a blow of his fist or a blow from a bludgeon. The first runner now makes his appearance and offers his commiseration to the sailor. He condoles with him and enters into a sham fight with the second runner. The poor sailor begins to feel some gratitude for the man who has given him sympathy, and who has apparently fought for him, and he gives in without further pressure and goes off with runner number one.

Six months ago a sailor was induced to take one of these cards, and to promise the runner to go with him, but subsequently he thought it to change his mind, and was proceeding to the Home in Cherry-street when he was assaulted, and was not permitted to proceed until he handed $15 to the runner, whose card he accepted. In other cases, threats of taking away life have been freely used to sailors who refused to patronize the boarding-houses. Last Winter, it will be remembered, five sailors, after being paid off from the man-of-war ship Delaware, were kidnapped and robbed of $1,700, by two men who represented themselves as boarding-house runners. The Captains of sailing vessels are in bodily fear of this organized gang, which accounts for the facility with which they succeeded in boarding the vessels off Staten Island. There are very few masters of vessels who refuse them access to the ships, hence the boarding-house keepers are enabled to obtain quite as many sailors as the two Homes. Captains have been asked why they permitted these ruffians to board their vessels, and their general reply was that if they gave any obstruction to this gang, they would not feel that their lives were safe at night in New-York. They admit that it is a disgrace to the first city in America that these fifty rowdies are allowed to dictate terms, both to the merchants and Captains in reference to the sailors, but they see no remedy for it, as long as the authorities permit such a gang to exist. They cite the fact that a law was passed in the year 1864, prohibiting the boarding of vessels by runners until the ship arrived at the pier, but that the law was never enforced.

Perhaps, after all, the greatest outrage practiced on the sailor is that of causing his arrest for an imaginary assault committed on the high seas. The day on which a sailor is paid off he generally knows to the boarding-house keeper or runner, who gets, by means of a shyster attorney, a warrant from the Marine Court for the arrest of the sailor on a trumped-up complaint made by some ready accomplice of an alleged assault committed perhaps twelve months previously, and armed with this warrant, and accompanied by a Deputy Sheriff, they lie in wait for the sailor until he leaves the ship. The sailor is pointed out to the Deputy Sheriff, (who generally gets a portion of the spoils,) who approaches and arrests the unfortunate sailor, who is naturally astonished at being stopped in such a manner. The Deputy Sheriff displays his badge, pulls out his warrant, and, after a consultation with his employer, whispers to the sailor "they'll let you go by paying $20; if you don't pay it, you'll have to come right away to the Tombs." The sailor at first refuses, he protests against paying money to get rid of a prosecution for an assault he never had been guilty of committed, but finally, being hauled off, he pays the money for the purpose of possessing his liberty. Not long ago a case similar to this occurred, and Justice DOWLING sent the shyster attorney to the Island for six months. The outrages practiced on the sailors who arrive at New-York are of daily occurrence, and it is a disgrace to the authorities of this City that they are permitted.

Encroachment of the Union Ferry Company Upon the Public Lands of Brooklyn.

The Street Commissioners of Brooklyn some time since asked the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, Mr. DE WITT, in reference to the encroachments of the Union Ferry Company on the public land at the foot of Fulton-street, in the erection of their new ferry-house. The Counsel yesterday returned an opinion, which covered the question in all its bearings, and concluded by saying:

It is enough for you to know that here has been a deliberate encroachment upon land, paved, controlled and acknowledged as a public street through a long series of years; and an encroachment made with a confession of trespass; and, above all, an encroachment accompanied by a defiance of the City's power and an insult to the City's dignity. To my mind, your duty is plain. Give the Company a short notice to withdraw the obstruction. If they neglect or fail to obtain the approval of the City Government, proceed to the spot, taking with you all the force necessary for the enterprise, and, no matter whether the obstruction be the finished office of a wealthy corporation, or a family, in the steady language of the law remove the obstruction. In such emergency Governments, to be respectable, must use force.

THE TAMMANY TURMOIL.

Further Testimony Against Sergt. Hicks—Disturbance at a Meeting of Citizens by the Roughs of the Ring Fully Proven.

A second hearing was had, yesterday, before Commissioner BARR in the case of the complaint of Mr. JOHN FOLEY against Sergt. NATHANIEL T. HICKS, of the Twenty-third Precinct, for neglect of duty in failing to preserve order at the recent meeting of the Citizens' Association of the Twelfth and Nineteenth Wards, which was greatly disturbed by the hirelings of Tammany. On the previous occasion the trial had been proceeded with notwithstanding the protest of Mr. FOLEY, who sent a letter saying, as he had been served with a subpœna only on the previous evening he had not had time to get his witnesses, and could not be present. Yesterday, however, Mr. FOLEY was present, and, in addition to the statements of his affidavit, which have been published in full in the TIMES, said that the business of the meeting which was to denounce and assist in exposing the corruption and frauds of the Tammany Four had been nearly finished before the worst of the disturbance occurred, but this stage of the proceedings had been reached only through serious interruptions from the tools of the Ring. Mr. FOLEY then said: "Sergt. HICKS might have preserved order if he chose. I called him three or four times to the platform, and asked him to preserve order and put those people out. He said it was a public meeting. I said it was not, but it was a meeting of the Association. He was back among the disturbers, and I have since heard they gave him three cheers, but I did not hear them myself."

At this point Commissioner BARR produced the hand-bill of the Association, headed, "Seven to Fifty Millions of Dollars Stolen from the Taxpayers by our City Officials! Wake up your ancestors to about it!" Mr. BARR asked, "Is this your hand-bill?" Mr. FOLEY replied, "Yes; but that did not make it a public meeting. There is nothing to indicate that the public were invited to participate in the meeting, but any one could have spoken for Mr. HALL, provided order had been preserved."

Mr. W. J. HUMES here interrupted, saying that he considered it a public meeting, but, public or not, he left about 9 o'clock, as the disorder became so great he began to have fears for his personal safety.

Mr. BARR—Please let Mr. FOLEY get through.

Mr. FOLEY—I think it was a gross outrage that Sergt. HICKS did not put those men out when he saw the disturbance at the meeting.

Mr. BARR—He was not a judge, and could not determine that.

Mr. FOLEY—Why should he be a judge as to its being a public meeting? We want fair play, and we will have it in spite of the Police.

Mr. BARR—You shall have it as far as we are concerned.

Mr. FOLEY—Your remarks don't seem to so indicate.

Mr. BARR—That is gratuitous on your part.

Mr. FOLEY. Well, Sir, I can't help it.

E. G. CRAMER was called, and, being sworn, was examined by Mr. FOLEY, and testified that he heard Mr. FOLEY order Sergt. HICKS two or three times to put the men out, which he did not do, and he then heard three cheers proposed for HICKS; he saw several men among the disturbers who hang around the City Hall, but he did not know that they were on the City pay-roll; one of them, however, and the most prominent among them, was a messenger in the Controller's Office. No witness had been put to work so great secrecy and success to secure the implicated persons. As soon as the ante-mortem statement had been made, Sergt. QUINN and Detective WALKER, both of the Thirteenth Precinct, went to the house of the abortionist, No. 116 Clinton-street, where, however, the only person found was ANN BRICK, the house-keeper, who was immediately arrested and locked up in a cell at the Station-house. From her they obtained information that Mrs. BURNS was at her country house at Comac, near Centreport, Long Island, but before proceeding to secure her they arrested HARRY PULLEN, the young man mentioned by the girl, who claims to be a counsellor in the employ of Mr. ALBERT ELSEN. He freely admitted that he had been intimate with the deceased, but denied that he ever proposed to her to have an abortion performed. He was, however, locked up, as was NELLIE RYAN, the room-mate of deceased, who went with her to the house of the abortionist, and saw her enter a private room with Mrs. BURNS, but did not see the operation performed. Her testimony was, however, important, and she was detained in custody by Sergt. BROOKS.

Having made this satisfactory progress in their work, Sergt. QUINN and Detective WALKER went late on Monday afternoon to arrest the principal, and reached her residence at Comac about 9 o'clock at night. They found the abortionist living in an elegant mansion, furnished throughout in the most splendid manner, and which she was the owner, as also of one hundred acres of fine land adjacent to it, all of which was in a high state of cultivation. They found in the house, besides the proprietress and servants, her son and four young ladies. When the officers dropped in upon this quiet home circle and briefly informed Mrs. BURNS that she was wanted in the City, there was naturally intense consternation. The woman, however, had entirely forgotten poor MARY RUSSELL, and supposing she was wanted for some evidence in connection with the trunk tragedy, with which she knew she had nothing to do, she freely offered to return to the City. There was no train until next morning, and she offered the officers the hospitalities of her house, furnishing them excellent bedrooms, but QUINN and WALKER were too wary to sleep lest their prisoner might escape. She did not, however, have any such intention apparently, as she appeared in due time equipped for the journey, and at 4 o'clock in the morning the parties took the train at Northfield for this City, and reached the Station-house about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Then she was told of the death of MARY RUSSELL and did not need to be informed why she was wanted. Without giving any explanation of her deed, or almost without taking the trouble to deny it, she was led away to a cell and locked up.

Every one concerned in the tragedy being thus secured, Coroner YOUNG gave the case to the public. During yesterday Drs. FINNELL, VANDEWATER and MARSH made a post-mortem examination of the remains of deceased, with the result of showing that death had been produced by metro peritonitis, the result of an abortion. A jury was impanelled by Coroner YOUNG, and the body having been viewed, a burial permit was granted, and the inquest adjourned until Monday next. The prisoners, ANN BRICK, NELLIE RYAN, and HARRY PULLEN were sent to the House of Detention by Coroner YOUNG, with the view of holding them as witnesses at the inquest, when the jury will decide which one of them, if any, shall be held as an accessory to the crime. The principal, Mrs. BURNS was sent to the Tombs to await the result of the inquest. She is a tall woman, about forty-five years of age, who, although not one of the advertising abortionists, has been known to the Police for some time as being engaged in the horrible business. It is said she was arrested about two years ago for an attempt to commit the crime, but was discharged for want of sufficient evidence.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

Judge SUTHERLAND, yesterday, made an order staying proceedings under the writ of mandamus issued by him in the case of CONNELL, to compel the Controller and Commissioners of the new Court-house to pay $41,000, due for iron work done on the new Court-house. This will necessarily postpone payment for at least three months.

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, before Judge BENEDICT, JAMES KEEGAN, a politician, was convicted of stealing a gold watch from a man named KEEGAN at a picnic in Lion Park. When arrested, a slung-shot was discovered in the possession of the prisoner, and, in referring to this fact, the Judge took occasion to say that no one but a coward who had a murderous intent would carry such a weapon, and he had no reasonable doubt whatever of his guilt. He sent him to State Prison for five years.

Six boys named William Ryan, Frank Bertrand, John Purcell, William Gallagher, and Henry and Charles Brown, were arraigned in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday on a charge of having stolen machinery to the value of $150 from the manufactory of MARTIN LENNAN. Three of the boys were sent to the Protectory and three to the Juvenile Asylum. JAMES DUFFY, who received the stolen property, was committed in default of $500 bail.

Dr. MARY FRANCES SEELEY, daughter of Dr. T. T. SEELEY, of the Cleveland Water Cure, and Dr. SARA C. SEWARD, niece of Ex-Secretary SEWARD, graduates of the Women's Medical College of Philadelphia, and Miss GUTHRIE, of Philadelphia, sailed today in the Idaho for Calcutta. They go under the auspices of the Women's Union Missionary Society for Heathen Lands, of which Mrs. T. C. DORENUS is President.

Coroner HERRMAN held an inquest, yesterday, in the case of PAUL BOLDER, sixty-five years of age, who died from a fracture of the skull in consequence of being knocked down by LAWRENCE J. MURTHA, who afterward surrendered himself to the Police. The jury found from the evidence that the violence was inflicted without any felonious intent, and MURTHA was admitted to bail in $1,000 for his appearance if wanted.

The annual election for Directors of the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company was held yesterday afternoon, at No. 61 Broadway. The following named gentlemen were elected Directors: James M. Bunker, Wm. Orton, Horace F. Clark, Marshall Lefferts, Tracy R. Edson, Alonzo B. Cornell and Joseph M. Cook.

Several complaints of drunkenness have been recently made against Police officers, and Mr. MILLER, who witnessed the occurrence, had the three men arrested, and HURLEY conveyed to his residence. The prisoners were taken to the Yorkville Police Court, yesterday, where Justice BERRY committed BURNS without bail, and held KANE and MCNAMARA in default of $1,000 bail each. HURLY is not expected to recover.

ANOTHER ABORTION MURDER.

Death of Another Victim—Arrest of all the Parties Concerned in the Tragedy.

Owing to the singular skill with which the Police and Coroner YOUNG have managed the affair, another case of murder by abortion was brought to public notice yesterday, by the arrest of all those responsible for the tragedy, and by the completion of all the proofs necessary for the conviction of the guilty parties. The victim in this case was a beautiful girl twenty-two years of age, named MARY RUSSELL, who was employed in the envelope factory of GEORGE F. NESBITT & Co., Nos. 165, 155 and 167 Pearl-street, and roomed with a young companion, NELLIE RYAN, at No. 89 East Broadway. The abortionist was Mrs. ELIZA ANN BRUNIGER, who, however, carried on her nefarious business at No. 116 Clinton-street as Mrs. BURNS. The story of the death of young MARY RUSSELL is brief, but in connection with the trunk tragedy, is greatly increased in interest.

Two weeks ago today MARY went to the residence of her brother-in-law, WILLIAM ALBERTSEN, a highly respectable gentleman, who is foreman in a job printing office, and lives at No. 21 Ridge-street. She admitted her indiscretion, but denied that there had been an abortion attempted, and as she was very sick, threw herself upon the mercy of her relatives. They did not cast her off, but instead summoned Dr. JAMES and treated her with every possible kindness. Dr. JAMES being shortly compelled to leave the City, turned this case, with his other business, over to Dr. J. P. BELVEN, of No. 448 Grand-street, who was formerly one of the Police surgeons. His suspicions were soon aroused, and he finally told her relatives that he thought there was something wrong, and advised them to tell her to make a clean confession of the matter. This advice was given the girl, but meantime her case became more serious, and on Sunday afternoon Dr. BLIVEN went to the Thirteenth Precinct Station-house, where he found Sergt. BROOKS in command, and reported the case to him, with the expression of his opinion that he had every reason to believe that the girl was suffering from the effects of an abortion. Sergt. BROOKS immediately dispatched Detective WALKER for Coroner YOUNG, and that officer visiting the dying girl at the house No. 21 Ridge-street, on Sunday evening, she made the following ante-mortem statement:

I have been in this way a little over two months. I am twenty-two years of age. Two weeks ago I had an operation performed upon me by Mrs. BURNS, in Clinton-street, between Delancey and Broome. Mrs. BURNS performed the operation for the purpose of producing an abortion. She used instruments, but did not produce any effect. After she had used the instruments she told me if anybody asked me about it, I must say it was Dr. THAYER who performed the operation; she then told me to go home. I walked home. After I got home I was taken with severe pain in my head, accompanied by vomiting. Three or four days after the delivery occurred. A week ago Wednesday I came to this house. I then sent for Dr. BLIVEN, who has been attending me ever since. I am not married. HARRY PULLEN was the person who wronged me. He gave me $10 to give Mrs. BURNS to have the operation performed. I gave the money to Ann Brown. He is not married. He has not been to see me since he gave me the money, two weeks ago. When Mrs. BURNS performed the operation on me there was another woman present, who I was told was Mrs. BURNS' housekeeper. That woman pressed me against the wall while Mrs. BURNS performed the operation. I am too weak to sign my name.

This invaluable testimony had not been secured any too soon, as at 2 o'clock Monday morning the unfortunate girl was dead. Meanwhile, however, the Police had been at work in great secrecy and success to secure the implicated persons. As soon as the ante-mortem statement had been made, Sergt. QUINN and Detective WALKER, both of the Thirteenth Precinct, went to the house of the abortionist, No. 116 Clinton-street, where, however, the only person found was ANN BRICK, the house-keeper, who was immediately arrested and locked up in a cell at the Station-house. From her they obtained information that Mrs. BURNS was at her country house at Comac, near Centreport, Long Island, but before proceeding to secure her they arrested HARRY PULLEN, the young man mentioned by the girl, who claims to be a counsellor in the employ of Mr. ALBERT ELSEN. He freely admitted that he had been intimate with the deceased, but denied that he ever proposed to her to have an abortion performed. He was, however, locked up, as was NELLIE RYAN, the room-mate of deceased, who went with her to the house of the abortionist, and saw her enter a private room with Mrs. BURNS, but did not see the operation performed. Her testimony was, however, important, and she was detained in custody by Sergt. BROOKS.

Having made this satisfactory progress in their work, Sergt. QUINN and Detective WALKER went late on Monday afternoon to arrest the principal, and reached her residence at Comac about 9 o'clock at night. They found the abortionist living in an elegant mansion, furnished throughout in the most splendid manner, of which she was the owner, as also of one hundred acres of fine land adjacent to it, all of which was in a high state of cultivation. They found in the house, besides the proprietress and servants, her son and four young ladies. When the officers dropped in upon this quiet home circle and briefly informed Mrs. BURNS that she was wanted in the City, there was naturally intense consternation. The woman, however, had entirely forgotten poor MARY RUSSELL, and supposing she was wanted for some evidence in connection with the trunk tragedy, with which she knew she had nothing to do, she freely offered to return to the City. There was no train until next morning, and she offered the officers the hospitalities of her house, furnishing them excellent bedrooms, but QUINN and WALKER were too wary to sleep lest their prisoner might escape. She did not, however, have any such intention apparently, as she appeared in due time equipped for the journey, and at 4 o'clock in the morning the parties took the train at Northfield for this City, and reached the Station-house about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Then she was told of the death of MARY RUSSELL and did not need to be informed why she was wanted. Without giving any explanation of her deed, or almost without taking the trouble to deny it, she was led away to a cell and locked up.

Every one concerned in the tragedy being thus secured, Coroner YOUNG gave the case to the public. During yesterday Drs. FINNELL, VANDEWATER and MARSH made a post-mortem examination of the remains of deceased, with the result of showing that death had been produced by metro peritonitis, the result of an abortion. A jury was impanelled by Coroner YOUNG, and the body having been viewed, a burial permit was granted, and the inquest adjourned until Monday next. The prisoners, ANN BRICK, NELLIE RYAN, and HARRY PULLEN were sent to the House of Detention by Coroner YOUNG, with the view of holding them as witnesses at the inquest, when the jury will decide which one of them, if any, shall be held as an accessory to the crime. The principal, Mrs. BURNS was sent to the Tombs to await the result of the inquest. She is a tall woman, about forty-five years of age, who, although not one of the advertising abortionists, has been known to the Police for some time as being engaged in the horrible business. It is said she was arrested about two years ago for an attempt to commit the crime, but was discharged for want of sufficient evidence.
